BATTLE IS AWAITED IN CUBA

Gomez Rushes an Army Against Negro Rebels; No Intervention Unless Absolutely Imperative; Big Fleet Speeding South

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The United States government will not intervene in Cuba unless American lives are menaced or American interests suffer more heavily than they have up to date in the negro uprising.

President Taft today sent a cablegram to President Gomez assuring him that this government has no present intention of intervening in Cuban affairs, and that warships and troops are being sent merely as a precautionary measure. President Taft telegraphed a message from Jersey City to Washington and h was officially cabled through the regular State Department channel from this city to Havana.

The message was an answer to President Gomez's cable to President Taft assuring him that the Cuban government is able to cope with the situation there and that there is no call for interference at present.

The message of President Taft clearly carries the threat that if the Cuban government is unable to carry out its policy of pacification this country will act.

"Americans must be protected," is the policy which the United States will follow. Protection will also be given to other foreigners in Cuba, to avoid any diplomatic imbroglio with European powers, whose subjects hold large interests in the island.

A force of 8,000 men will be available in Cuba by Wednesday without sending any ships in addition to those which have already been dispatched.

Eight battleships, one armored cruiser, a transport and two colliers form the fleet now on its way to Cuba. The Prairie will arrive today.

The marines are divided as follows:

Prairie—1,000.

Will Awe the Rebels.

This government is of the opinion the presence of nine great fighting ships within five hours of the Cuban coast and fifteen hours of Mexican territory will have a most salutary effect upon the revolution now in progress in both countries. If the moral effect of the dreadnaughts is not sufficient, they will be ordered to "manoeuvre" off the Cuban or Mexican coasts, while the news they have on board some 2,000 marines, armed and ready for instant service will be given widespread circulation.

Up to noon today no news had been received from the gunboat Paducah, which is supposedly at Nipe Bay, Cuba, where there are large American fruit and iron interests, which were reported threatened by the rebels.

Besides the Nebraska, Georgia, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Mississippi and Washington, which will arrive at Key West Wednesday night, it is thought the Louisiana, Kansas, New Hampshire and South Carolina, now en route to Hampton Roads—supposedly to meet the German fleet on Thursday of this week—will be rushed to the same place, and that later these ships will be joined by the Utah and Florida, together with some smaller ships. In case this is done the United States will have fifteen warships in Cuban water; more than operated there Florida, together with some smaller during the entire Spanish-American war.

Minnesota, Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio, Georgia, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Nebraska—200 each.

Washington—119.

In addition, each of the big ships can

AGAINST DIRECT SENATORS

There will be no popular preferential election of the successor to United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane.

By a vote of 21 to 13, with two pairs, on a roll call, the State Senate today rejected the Donahue bill, or Oregon plan, for the election of United States Senators and substituted a bill simply providing for the direct preferential nomination of senatorial candidates by the voters of the different parties.

Only two Republicans voted for the Donahue bill, Nason of Haverhill, a Roosevelt progressive, and Stearns of Cambridge. The Democrats stood solidly by it.

Escape Direct Vote.

Under the bill passed by the Senate today, the voters are merely given the right to express a preference at the primaries. The name of the candidate of each party receiving the highest number of votes would then go before the Legislature.

Under the Donahue bill, each party would choose its candidates at the primary. The name of the candidate of each party would then go upon the official ballot at the State election and the Legislature would be morally bound to support the candidate receiving the highest vote, whether he be Republican or Democrat.

One of the arguments which was quietly used today to get Republican Senators into line against the Donahue bill was that its passage would practically mean "handing John F. Fitzgerald the United States Senatorship on a platter."

The various candidates for Senator Crane's seat, under the system provided for in the Brown bill, adopted by the Senate today, would not make their fight directly before the voters, but wage their campaigns for the selection of legislators favorable to their candidacies.

How They Voted.

The line-up on the question of substituting the Brown bill for the Oregon plan was:

Yes: Republicans—Adams of Marblehead, Allen of Melrose, Barlow of Lowell, Barnes of Weymouth, Bennett of Saugus, Blanchard of Somerville, Brown of Medford, Chace of Dighton, Clark of Brockton, Coolidge of Northampton, Benny of Worcester, Eldridge of Yarmouth, Hersey of Hingham, McLane of Fall River, Mulligan of Natick, Newhall of Lynn, Pearson of Brookline, Schoonmaker of Ware, Stowe of Springfield, Tinkham of Boston—21.

Democratis—None.

Against substitution and in favor of the Donahue bill:

Republicans—Nason of Haverhill, Stearns of Cambridge—2.

Democrats—Burke of Milford, Halley of Lawrence, Hatton of Charlestown, Horgan of Dorchester, Hunt of Worcester, Joyce of Boston, Mack of North Adams, Powers of Boston, Quigley f Holyoke, Schofield of Ipswich, Timilty of Boston—11. Total against—13.

Paired in favor of substitution:

Republicans—Vinson of Boston, Ross of New Bdford—2.

Paired against:

MALOY SENT TO PRISON FOR TWO DEATHS BY AUTO

John A. Maloy, the chauffeur whose automobile struck and killed two Elevated employes at Boylston and Dartmouth streets, a month ago today, pleaded guilty to the charge of manslaughter in the Superior Criminal Court today and was sentenced to serve not less than five nor more than seven years in State prison at Charlestown.

Maloy, who is twenty-eight years of age and lived at No. 166 Columbia street, Cambridge, was brought into the court at 10 o'clock. He pleaded guilty after Chief Dugan read to Judge Chase the chauffeur's record for overspeeding and other misdemeanors within the past three years.

It was Maloy's car which killed Thomas Donoghue and John Connolly, two Elevated workmen, on the early morning of April 27. Donoghue left a widow and a number of children. Both men lived in South Boston. In the Municipal Court Maloy was held in $10,000 bonds. Later the Grand Jury indicted him on the charge of manslaughter. Three weeks ago the charge was raised to second degree murder on two counts, and Maloy was held without bail for arraignment today in the Superior Court.

Maloy's record as read by Chief Dugan today showed that he had been arrested six times since October 7, 1909.

One-Legged Men Buy a Pair of New Shoes

NORTH ADAMS, May 27.—Steve Waskowski of Windson, who is left legless, met Joe Barchury of Adams, who is right legless, on the street here today and they agreed that they needed new shoes.

Steve said: "I'm rather close to the ground, Joe."

"Me, too," responded Joe.

"Let's get a new pair of shoes and share 'em," said Steve.

"You're on," said Joe.

They lost not time in going to Frank Szetella's shoe store which was nearby.

"We want a pair of shoes," both chimed together.

Szetella saw visions of selling two pair of shoes and rubbed his hands in satisfaction. But imagine his surprise when one took the right shoe and the other the left.

"A perfect fit," said both Steve and Joe, as each handed him a dollar, making the price of the pair of shoes.

OLYMPIC ATHLETE M'GRATH SHOT, BUT WILL ENTER CONTEST

NEW YORK, May 27.—Matt McGrath, the world's champion hammer thrower, was nearly lost to the American Olympic team as the result of an Italian's attack late last night.

McGrth, who is a policeman on the New York force, was shot twice while chasing the Italian, who was charged with attempting to kill a man in Harlem. Both bullets entered the fleshy part of McGrath's left shoulder and inflicted wounds that were painful, but will not interfere with his going to Stockholm, though he will be relieved from police duty for some days.

Giovanni Landi, the man who did the shooting, fired shots at several other persons before he was himself disabled by a brick thrown by the captain of a barge.

MANY ARRESTS FOR PLOT AGAINST LIFE OF THE KING OF ITALY

ROME, May 27.—Wholesale arrests are being made throughout Italy today as the result of the discovery of a plot to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. These report that the discovery of the plot followed admissions made by Antonio Dalbo, the young anarchist, who tried to shoot King Victor Emmanuel several months ago.

FACTORY GIRL TAKES POISON

Fifteen-year-old Catherine Sapaorora, ran into the sewing room of the National Knitting Company at No. 380 Harrison avenue today, crying that she had drank poison and fell to the floor unconscious.

One of the girls telephoned for Dr. Kline at the Hotel Woodcock, and told him the girl had swallowed sulphonaphthol. Over the wire the doctor gave orders she should be given milk, which was done.

Dr. Kline sent her to the City Hospital. She is on the dangerous list.

Miss Sapaorora lives at No. 7 Oneida street, South End. The other girls said she told them that she had quarrelled with her aunt and had eaten no breakfast.

At the girl's home her aunt, Victoria Parnell, was prostrated to hear of the girl's attempt to kill herself.

BIGELOW BEATEN IN BIG SUIT

The claim of the Old Dominion Copper Mining & Smelting Company to recover from Albert S. Bigelow, the Boston financier, more than $2,000,000 alleged to have been obtained by stock manipulation was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in Washington today.

The opinion, delivered by Justice Lurton, was an important commentary upon the obligations of the court of one State to take cognizance of the decisions of the courts of another State under the full face and credit clause of the Constitution. The court's holding is that the New York decision did not deprive the company of the right to obtain judgment against Bigelow in Massachusetts.

Three States Involved.

Bigelow's appeal from the judgment found against him in the Massachusetts courts was fought out at Washington before the Supreme Court at Washington. Three States, New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey had taken a hand in the case before it was brought before the Supreme Court. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston was retained to take charge of the case of the Old Dominion Copper & Smelting Company. Opposed to him was Former United States Senator John C. Spooner.

The Old Dominion Company sued Bigelow ten years ago to recover for alleged "undisclosed promoters' profits fraudulently taken by Bigelow in conjunction with Leonard Lewisohn of New York, in breach of their fiduciary duty to the corporation as promoters and directors of the Old Dominion Company."

Several of the original stockholders of the company declared they had discovered evidence that Bigelow had aided in robbing the company of 30,000 shares of stock, so it was alleged.

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN ELEVATOR WELL

The body of James Ferguson of No. 97 Burke street was found early today crushed in between the elevator and wall of Drake's bakery at No. 85 Savin street, Roxbury. It is believed the man was accidentally killed about eight o'clock last night.

Ferguson was fifty-three years old and employed at the bakery as a watchman. Walter Taft, the elevator man, tried to start the elevator today and found that it would not move. He made an investigation and found the body of the man.

The accident had taken place on the first floor, but no one could tell just how it occurred.

WILBUR WRIGHT HAS A SERIOUS RELAPSE

DAYTON, O., May 27.—The condition of Wilbur Wright, the aviator, is again highly critical today, following a relapse late last night. Physicians are in constant attendance at the bedside, ready to resort to heroic measures unless his temperature soon goes down.

Attorneys Will Maintain That Convicted Woman Is Innocent of Crime.

MY AUNT MADE ME TELL WHAT I DID IN COURT.—Statement of Accousia Cusumano, whose testimony at trial convicted mother.

Governor Foss was deluged today with letters and coupons cut from the AMERICAN and filled with names and addresses of residents of Massachusetts, asking him to commute the death sentence of Mrs. Lena Cusumano to life imprisonment.

Most of those who pleaded with the Governor asked for the life of the woman. Some asked him to save her life and also that of Enrico Mascioli, condemned to die with her for the murder of her husband. Most of those who wrote were women.

Thomas J. Grady and William A. Coughlin, attorneys for the condemned man and woman, went to the State House this afternoon to argue with Governor Foss for the commutation of the sentences.

In the case of the woman, the attorneys will rely upon two arguments: first, her sex, and second, that she is innocent.

The most startling development in the case today was the announcement that alienists have declared Accousia Cusumano, the daughter whose testimony did much to convict Mrs. Cusumano, is mentally deficient. A report to this effect will be presented to the Governor.

Attorney Grady has declared his belief, and in this he is backed by the protests and petitions of thousands of women and men from all over the State, that the execution of a woman would be a disgraceful thing.

He declares that from his own knowledge of the case, intimate as an attorney's must be, he is convinced that Mrs. Cusumano is not guilty of the crime charged against her. He will adduce several facts in support of this contention.

First, that, according to Mrs. Cusumano's own statement to her mother and to her attorneys, Mascioli frightened her into silence.

Second, that Mrs. Cusumano's sister, one of the most damaging State's witnesses, had hated Mrs. Cusumano since girlhood, a hatred growing out of an old love affair. Attorney Grady declares that Mrs. Cusumano's former sweetheart carried her sister, and that the two were enemies thereafter.

Jury Misinterpreted Facts.

Third, that much of the evidence presented, notably that relative to the bloodstained clothing, was misinterpreted by the jury.

Fourth, that one of the witnesses against the two, a man named Pancaldo, was

JORDAN APPEAL REFUSED

Somerville Wife Slayer, After Battle for His Life for Several Years, Loses Case in Highest Court on Plea of Juror's Insanity.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Chester S. Jordan, who was found guilty in 1909 of murdering his wife in Somerville, Mass., today upheld the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth in denying a new trial on the ground that one of the jurors, Willis White, was insane.

Chester S. Jordan killed his wife, Honora, an actress, in their home in Somerville, September 1, 1908. The woman's body was found, cut in thirteen pieces and jammed into a trunk. Jordan hired a hackman to carry the trunk to a steamship pier, then apparently changed his mind and had it carried to a lodging house on Hancock street. The hackman reported the incident to the police, and Jordan was arrested in his room in the lodging house, and after arraignment was indicted. He was lodged in the Charles street jail, and has been there ever since.

Shortly after his arrest Jordan told his version of his wife's death to the police. He declared that they quarreled together, became involved in a scuffle and he thrust her away from him. She fell downstairs and he went to bed.

Next day, he said, he found her dead body at the foot of the stairs, and in a panic of fear, hacked it to pieces, crammed the fragments into the trunk, and planned to dispose of it.

The trial attracted wide attention, because of the murderer's prominent relatives who rallied to his defence. His sister is the wife of Jesse Livermore, the New York cotton broker, who formerly had a Boston office. Livermore and his wife committed themselves to Jordan's defence, and Livermore gave thousands of dollars toward hiring the lawyers and gathering evidence for the trial.

Jordan Tried 3 Years Ago.

Jordan was brought before the court in April, 1909, seven months after his crime. He was convicted, the verdict being returned on May 4. A few days later, one of the jurors at the trial, Willis A. White, went violently insane. He is now in the Worcester Insane Asylum.

The trial had been bitterly fought at every point. Charles W. Bartlett and Harvey H. Pratt represented Jordan and they filed numerous exceptions to the verdict and sought a new trial. Exceptions and motions for a new trial were overruled. Exceptions to this overruling were taken and a rescript was handed down. Then District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County moved for sentence under the verdict.

On January 7, 1911, sixteen months after his conviction, Jordan was brought into court for sentence. The court sentenced him to death by electrocution on March 12, 1911.

Jordan's counsel then took up the insanity of the juror, White, and sought a new trial, arguing that the fact of this man's mental condition meant that Jordan had not been given a trial according to due process of law. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts refused to grant a new trial. Jordan's attorneys sought a writ of error, and Chief Justice Aiken issued this writ, issuing at the same time a stay of execution. This was in February, 1911. Jordan has been in the East Cambridge jail ever since, waiting for the hearing on the writ to come before the United States Supreme Court.

Long Months in Jail.

During the long months in the Charles street jail, Jordan has betrayed little anxiety as to his ultimate fate. He and Big Bill Kelliher, prize prisoners at one time, were a healthy and happy pair, and their Thanksgiving dinner, with turkey, cranberry sauce and all the other ingredients, were the envy of the other prisoners. His many relatives were frequent visitors at the murderer's cell, and brought him dainties, food and sweets, from outside. For a long time, he regularly had his meals sent into the jail from outside, but this practice was eventually checked.

When this happened, Jordan issued one of his rare complaints. He didn't like the monotonous prison fare.

FINAL PLEA FOR LIFE OF MRS. CUSUMANO

Counsel for Woman Condemned for Killing Husband Go to Governor.

Maintain That She Is Innocent; Daughter's Story Is Discredited.

frightened into the testimony which he gave.

Firth, that Accousis Cusumano, daughter of the condemned woman, whose testimony at the trial was of the most damaging nature, was "coached" beforehand, and "memorized" her testimony. The attorneys also charge that this girl has been defective, mentally, since birth.

Sixth, that the jury in passing their verdict, was led to believe that it lay in the power of the Governor alone, to commute a death penalty, and that he need not refer the matter to his Council.

Seventh, that Mascioli, himself, will absolve the woman. It is said the condemned murderer will sign a statement upon which the attorneys largely rely.

The attorneys will present their arguments to Governor Foss today, in response to his own request. He will consider the facts which they present in deciding whether or not he will refer the matter to the Executive Council.

Tomorrow night, in Faneuil Hall, a mass meeting will be held to protest against the execution of a woman. On Wednesday the Council meets, and it is then that the pleas for commutation are expected to be referred to that body.

Girl in Institution.

Acconsia Cusumano, the daughter of Mrs. Cusumano, has been located in the Massachusetts Institution for Feeble Minded Children in Waverley.

Thomas J. Grady, counsel for Mrs. Cusumano and Mascioli, when told that the girl had been located, said:

"She is under the care of the State, she is restrained, and it is not of my doing. I have asked Lucy, 'Did your aunt tell you what to say in court?' and she replied, "My aunt made me tell what I did in court.'"

That the girl has been under the observation of allenists for the past week is known, and through a reliable source it was learned that they believe her mentally deficient.

Miss Ellen C. Sawtelle, a former school teacher of the girl's, was seen last night and said that she did not believe that the Accousia girl was a normal child.

Over a month ago, Truant Officer Achille Forte of the North End, saw the girl on the street during school hours and questioned her. He was compelled to ask the same questions of Lucy, time after time in order to obtain satisfactory answers. She did not remember who her teacher was nor the school which she attended. She could not tell how long she had been at school nor tell anything of her studies.

Attorney Sees Mascioli.

Attorney Grady visited Mascioli at Charlestown. Afterwards he gave out the following statement.

"I visited Harry Mascioli Sunday and spent a large portion of the afternoon with him. When informed that allenists declared the little daughter of Mrs Cusumano mentally deficient since her birth he said that the one who induced the little girl to swear the lives of her mother and himself away has a lot to answer for.

"He also inquired about the whereabouts of a boarder by the name of Salvatore Panecaldo, who testified against him at the trial, and when informed that he had returned to Italy as soon as he had received his witness fees, he being kept in jail several months, he said: 'It's too bad he ran away. I am sure he would have told us if he stayed here that he was scared to death when he was first arrested and charged with this crime, and that when he said I told him I had killed Frank Cusumano he lied.'"

Pañecaldo was kept in the Plymouth jail from a time early in October until the 116th of February, and was paid at the rate of $1.50 a day for the entire time he was incarcerated and also $1.50 a day for the fifteen days which the trial consumed.

Contradicts Testimony.

In court he testified that he had been told by Mascioli that he (Mascioli) had committed the murder, but under cross-examination by Mr. Grady he admitted that he knew nothing of the murder.

Arrangements have been completed for the mass meeting which is to be held in Faneuil Hall tomorrow evening. Joseph Santosuosso, representing the Italians of the city, will preside, and Mrs. Florence Spooner, the leader of the Anti-Death Penalty League, will lead the representative women of Boston in their fight to save the woman's life.

Prince and Princess Rustomjee of Bombay, India, who are in Boston to give a series of lectures, will appear at the mass meeting and tell of capital punishment in India.

The princess, when seen at the Touraine, said:

"I have never heard of a woman going to the gallows in India. You Americans have an idea that we are a heathen people. We are not heathenish enough to believe in capital punishment. In some respects I think that America is behind us."

The prince said that he also would have something to say, and would look up the historical facts in the case and present them in a comparison with the laws of his own country.

James H. Vahey to Speak.

James H. Vahey, who defened Tucker, and Thomas J. Grady will both speak in behalf of the abolition of capital punishment.

Mrs. Cusumano will not be moved until word has been received from the Governor and Council, according to Sheriff Porter of Plymouth county.

The woman attended the special services held at the jail, led by Chaplain C. F. Andrews. A number of local singers furnished extra music, in which Mrs. Cusumano took especial interest.

She received a letter from her mother, informing her of the progress being made by her counsel in regard to commutation, and this letter had such a cheering effect that the condemned woman laughed and joked the remainder of the day.

Mrs. Cusumano takes her daily exercise in the corridor, and is allowed as many liberties as possible, although she passes the greater part of the time at a window. Her appetite is good and she is given as much Italian food as she desires.

She takes a great interest in the outside world and speaks of what she will do when released. Her children appear to be in her mind constantly.

FLORETTA VINING MAKES PLEA

By FLORETTA VINING.

It may seem strange that I ask for this woman to have a life sentence, when last week I asked that a man be put to death. This Mrs. Cusumano, in my opinion, had nothing to do with this murder. She got on with her industrious husband all right until this gay deceiver came into the house as a boarder. This man is entirely to blame. The $250 in Cusumano's pocket and the home was a great temptation and he fell.

This woman can be helpful in jail. She can wash and iron and can save the State expense by doing work; the man that died was useless.

His training was talk and pleasure; not so with this woman. She has always been hardworking, and I have nothing to say of her but she was industrious when she lived with her husband in my house. Her sister, Mrs. Perry, who lived next door to her at Waveland, is a neat, clean woman, the mother of two children, and has had the Cusumano children at her home since the tragedy. They have a home and are getting on fine. Mr. Perry is hardworking, late and early. These sisters lived side by side, both prospering. Why should she wish to be rid of her husband?

Mascioli had only good looks. His ability for earning I know nothing of, so I cannot think she knew anything of the murder until after it was done, and then she had to be a party to it, but if she gave him over to the police it would have been better, or if she had gone to her sister, such a sensible friend she had at hand. I wonder she did not at that time make a confidant of her sister next door.

There is quite a settlement of Italians where she lived. They have all prospered and have built good, substantial homes with thousands; there is a man there, Faddy, who has erected a large flag pole and flies a good, large American flag every pleasant day. Perry also has one; that pleases me, being so patriotic. Mrs. Cusumano had no object in breaking up a prosperous home. She knew she was in a law-abiding town, with a first-class chief of police, as she found out to her sorrow.

With all I sum up the case and ask for life imprisonment for her. The State of Massachusetts would not be guilty of putting to death by any means a woman. She has got a lifetime to repent, and I am her friend in this, her darkest, hour.

LAST WOMAN PUT TO DEATH BY STATE 134 YEARS AGO

The last hanging of a woman in Massachusetts took place in Worcester 134 years ago. The woman was Mrs. Bathsheba Ruggles Spooner, the beautiful young wife of Joshua Spooner, a Brookfield merchant.

Mrs. Spooner nursed a young Continental soldier named Ezra Ross. The soldier fell in love with her. She returned his affection. They planned to get rid of her husband. Finally two British soldiers were hired to kill him. Plied with drink, the soldiers killed Spooner and threw his body in a well.

The young wife, about to become a mother, and the three men were hanged. She died with a smile on her lips. Her only plea for clemency was in behalf of the unborn child, whose right to an existence inspired the mother to write an appeal to the Governor and his Council so eloquent that it overcome in a measure their political hatred, and they appointed a committee of twelve matrons to investigate Mrs. Spooner's condition.

Smiled on Way to Death.

Though five doctors reported that the woman was to become a mother, the jury of matrons returned a unanimous decision that Mrs. Spooned was not.

The women chosen for the committee were without exception neighbors of Mrs. Spooner, but women who never moved in the same social circles, and they taunted her with the fact that she could never again hold her head in the air as she passed them and consider herself their superiors.

Their triumph was short-lived, however, for one her way to the gallows behind the Union Station in Worcester Mrs. Spooner, beautifully gowned, nodded, bowed and smiled to her former friends and, with a hauteur worthy of a princess, snubbed the women who had taunted her.

The day of execution was a gala day in Worcester, and society from all over New England was present. After the execution an autopsy was held and it was found that her words had been true and had she lived she would shortly have become a mother.

Boast Lead to Arrest.

Bathsheba Ruggles was a very beautiful young woman. Before she was twenty she was married, for political reasons, to Spooner. Her husband was nearly sixty years old at the time of his marriage. In addition to the disparity in age it was an open secret that Spooner was unfaithful to his young wife and her life for several years was utter misery.

At this crisis Ezra Ross, a sixteen-year-old Continental soldier, appeared at the Spooner home, on his way to his own home in Ipswich. He was ill with fever, and Mrs. Spooner put her heart and soul into the task of nursing him. In a few months he was able to return to his home.

He returned to visit the Spooners, and from the instant of his second coming a guilty love was inflamed in the breast of Mrs. Spooner. As she afterwards admitted in a heroic endeavor to shield her sweetheart from all blame, she had suggested the murder of her aged husband and the boy had been fearful.

The two soldiers hired to kill the man, in drunken revelry later, boasted of the killing. That led to the arrests and executions.

4 HURT AS CARRIAGE WHEEL DROPS OFF

Four persons were badly injured in Jamaica Plain, when the rear wheel of the carriage in which they were riding fell off, throwing all four into the street. The carriage was owned and driven by Walter J. Driscoll of No. 396 Medford street, who was accompanied by Thomas J. Riley, of No. 9 Pearl place, Somerville, and two women friends.

CLARK RALLY AT PAWTUCKET

PAWTUCKET, May 27.—The Rhode Island campaign for Champ Clark starts tonight here with a big rally in Firemen's Hall, and some of the best known Democrats in the State will be on the list of speakers. The Democratic primary will be held in Rhode Island on Friday. Local leaders say that Speaker Clark will sweep the State and that sentiment for his ,his already overwhelming.

Pawtucket Democrats seem to be all for Clark, an dthe same is the case in Providence, Newport, Westerly and Woonsocket, according to those who have been feeling the pulse of the Democrats in those cities.

The Clark supporters are actively in the fight and are stirring up enthusiasm all over the State. The big fight locally in this campaign is for Democratic national committeeman.

National Committeeman George W. Greene, who is out for re-election to the office is understood to favor Champ Clark for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. Greene is being opposed by Cngressman O'Shaunessy.

Speakers tonight will be, Greene former Mayor Fitzgerald of this city, Attorneys Lawrence F. Nolan, Thomas L. Carty, and Albert B. West of Providence, Democratic floor leader in the Legislature.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

LEVANZIN DIARY TELLS INCIDENTS IN LONG FAST

Professor Agostino Levanzin, who is describing in the AMERICAN the remarkable fast he accomplished at the Carnegie Nutrition Laboratory in Roxbury, today gives further extracts from his diary. In Sunday's AMERICAN Professor Levanzin told of the first five days of the fast.

6th day—19th April, Friday.

Dull weather again! More than half of April is gone! When are we going to have a beautiful day to go out and enjoy some good air? I am stifling in here! Always with my window shut! Always confined in this bad air! Always these noises of machinery going on all the day long! I expected to be treated better by Dr. Benedict. I am a professional man like him. If he has a diploma I have three. Tomorrow I shall send him up all my documents.

The curve of my body weight loss is getting regular now. No dizziness whatever. I can go up and down the steep staircase of my balcony very easily, but these are not the steps for a fasting man. They are only three inches wide. I am afraid I shall tumble down sometime and break my neck. He promised comfortable sleeping apartments. Where are they? He did not mention yet the $200 that he promised to give me as soon as I land in Boston. This is causing me a great deal of anxiety and worry.

Bad taste, tongue coated, no hunger, no apprehension at all; feel very much inclined to mental work. During last days I have written many letters to family and friends, and to compile diary. Smell more sensitive, catarrh progressing favorably. No hoarseness as in the other long fast. No abundant expectoration. During fast was extraordinarily copious and tinged with blood. During last long fast I felt also pains in the heart area. I did not feel any this time. I never expected to have such an excellent fast.

7th day—20th April, Saturday.

A very fine day; at last I can enjoy the sun that I love so much! Slept several hours. I feel uplifted, with no uncomfortable sensations at all. I am singing and my mind is not at all dull. When the weather is depressing I feel sad. People might think that I am suffering from fasting, but that is not true. I feel awfully depressed in bad weather, also if I am eating three meals a day. Bad, billous, bitter taste persists. This is the only annoying inconvenience that I am suffering from.

Today only one pound lost. Curve decreasing gradually and regularly. About nine pounds loss since start.

Today I had sun, flowers, a letter from home with glad news of health. I am and must be happy.

8th day, 21, April, Sunday.

Slept about three hours. A very fine day—a real sun day. Feel O. K., only bad taste annoying me.

Today Mr. Higgins started his acetone test in breath. Positive reaction.

Dr. Benedict took me around the laboratory and made me speak into the dictatometer. My voice was strong and I could walk very steadily.

In the evening I felt very well, and was laughing. This shows what good or bad influence weather has on me.

Ninth day, 22, April, Monday.

Slept some hours, felt for the first time some sulphuric gas fumes. Weather again not very fine, but I feel rather well.

Without no sensation of hunger I do not feel very much inclined to mental work, because the brain is concentrated on the important work of the elimination of the impurities of the blood. I am rather talkative, but not irritable.

Dr. Milner, of the Agriculture Department, came to pay me a visit and was very pleased to meet him. He is very amiable and seems to be a very intelligent man.

Professor Cannon of Harvard came to see me and talked together about his theory of hunger. I submitted to him my views, and explained to him why I could not agree with his ideas. He gave me as a present his work on "The Explanation of Hunger" that I have read with great interest. Professor Cannon is a very nice man and his visit uplifted me for the whole day. I wish that he would have conducted my experiment. I would have been happier living for a month by his side.

Dr. Catcarth, the famous authority on metabolism, came in the balcony to see me. He is a jolly good fellow and I sympathized with him immediately. He studied a fast of fifteen days on Victor Beauti when in Glasgow, and so understood a lot about fasting. Dr. Benedict used to consult with him.

Later on Professor Folin came to see me. I was very much pleased to meet this man. He is very affable and very unpretending. I knew him by fame in Europe. I was honored and very glad to shake hands with him. I met him on another occasion in the laboratory and he took a very great interest in my fast. He undertook also some examinations of physiological chemistry in his hands and applied to them for the first time some methods newly discovered by himself.

In the evening I feel lonely, and so I become homesick. But I am feeling well and hopeful.

10th day—23d April, Tuesday.

Slept some hours. Day chilly and windy. Feel well. Taste not so bad. Tongue still coated. Do not feel desire of food when mentioned to me or read about it. I feel as if I have never been eating before. I am rather thirsty, but I do not like to increase quantity, not to alter results. I do not feel yet inclined to mental work and shall not feel a great impulse before my tongue clears up. That is when brain can concentrate itself on other work than that of elimination. The catarrh is nearly cured.

Today I had with Mr. Carpenter the first experiment of respiration, sitting down, writing, and after that Dr. Benedict took me around the laboratory, not to please me but to make me exert myself in some physical exercise before submitting me to the respiratory test.

Dr. Goodall was present today at Professor Langfeld's experiments to examine me after the dynamometric tests. He found no excitement in my heart after that hard exercise. Feel very well.

11th day—24th April, Wednesday.

A fine day, with sun shining. I feel well, too. Today is my marriage's twelfth anniversary and this made me think all day about home and about my dear Lucia, who imposed on herself so many sacrifices to encourage me to come for this great sacrifice for science's sake, of which she is fond, and enthusiastic as much as I am.

Having slept very little I felt drowsy and a bit irritable in the evening. Feel more thirsty. Eyes are better. I can read clearly at a greater distance. I have been left till now closed up in the balcony without giving me some outside exercise, as promised in contract letter. I feel depressed and wish ardently to respire some fresh air.

I am sad because I have received only one letter from home since a week. The fault is surely of the mail. I feel a great necessity of a change. I am stifling buried up in this balcony with experiments going on one after another, with very short intervals of time.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Men's Clothing Season is a Failure Through Unseasonable Weather and a Business Depression.

I am Facing the CRISIS of my Business Career

I MUST HAVE CASH

Georges

ALL cities are alike—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Providence—in their appreciation of this opportunity to get GEORGES Custom MODEL CLOTHES at my present phenomenally slashed prices. It pays to be honest. I laid my predicament squarely before the people of these five great cities, telling how the excessive rain killed the season, HOW I was fearfully overstocked in all my five stores and HOW it was imperative that I secure cash for my merchandise without delay. The results are most gratifying. But why should they not be? Never before have I voluntarily taken such a fearful loss.

TRADING STAMPS

STENOGRAPHERS TO FORM UNION

Work is under way to form a regular American Federation of Labor trade union among the thousands of women stenographers in this city. Miss Bertha Schwartz of No. 92 East Brookline street and Miss Lillian Slutsky of No. 48 Monroe street, Roxbury, are at the head of the movement for a standard wage and better conditions.

Both young women assert conditions are bad. They say it is difficult to get a living wage, and thousands of girls cannot get work.

"The situation among stenographers in Boston is unprecedented," said Miss Schwartz. "All the typewriter exchanges have big waiting lists, and at the employment bureaus the same answer is received every day—'we have nothing today.'

"I am in hopes of getting the stenographers to unionize. This would insure us, at least, a fair compensation for efficient service. There are stenographers who have been getting $18 to $25, who, if forced to leave their places, cannot get other positions that will pay more than $12."

EDUCATION IS CHINA'S NEED, SAYS DR. ELIOT

SHANGHAI, May 27.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, addressing the University Club here, declared the great need in China is "educational changes."

"In China," he said, "the present is clouded and the conditions are very grave. America, I feel sure, hopes to give to this great country the best that she can. We have witnessed a great change here, and it could not have been accomplished unless there had been long preparation for it in the minds of thinking Chinese.

"Educational changes are needed in China. The great advance in America is due in the main to the introduction of the inductive method of teaching, and it is a method that must be established in China. Lecturing is the most important of all systems of instruction of today."

TOOTING HORNS HAIL RIVERSIDE RESCUES

Patrolman William F. Long of the Metropolitan Park police is being praised today for his rescue of two canoeists at Riverside. As Long hauled the men into his boat the throng in canoes, on the banks and along the railing of Weston bridge broke into cheers and hand-clapping, while the horns on automobiles honked a tribute to the officer's bravery. A rule of the Park Commission prohibited the making public of the names of the rescued men.

PLYMOUTH TO HAVE BIG GAME PRESERVE

PLYMOUTH, May 27.—Plymouth is soon to have a large game preserve where birds and animals will be bred in a place remote from civilization. It will be under the supervision of the American Game Protective and Propagation Association of New York, in the eastern part of Carver and the western portion of this town at a point called East Head.

CLARK VS. ROOSEVELT, LEADERS ALL PREDICT

Clark Has Bulk of Delegates from States Vital to Democratic Victory

Thus far twenty-three States that will probably cast their electoral votes for the Democratic nominee for President have declared their choice of candidates. These States have 466 votes in the Baltimore convention and 233 votes of the 268 electoral votes necessary for the election of a President. The choice of these probable Democratic States is shown in the following table of electoral votes:

MORRISTOWN, N. J., May 27.—Theodore Roosevelt today defied the Republican National Committee, while thousands cheered him here. He said:

"The other day Mr. Taft said that the National Committee would do him justice. I want the people to do me justice; and that illustrates the difference between us.

"I appeal to the people and not to the National Committee with the expectation that it will misrepresent the people. I appeal to the people to control themselves. Remember, the National Committee was elected, not by the people, but by the politicians four years ago.

"Mr. Taft appeals to the National Committee elected by the politicians and I appeal to the people in this year 1912.

"Now, this is your fight. I have come here to ask that you stand by yourselves. We are making a fight for you to rule, for your right to rule and for your duty to rule."

Replying to the Taft charges that Rosevelt left a national deficit when he retired from office, the colonel said:

"In my administration the income exceeded the expenditures by somewhat between two and three hundred millions dollars; so much that we had almost too much surplus. We had more than we needed for our own running expenses and we used it to pay for the Panama Canal digging."

President Taft made a number of speeches today. At Matteawan the President urged voters to come to the polls tomorrow, and he declared his conviction that Roosevelt would lose the nomination.

"I think that you would have approved this administration clearly and without question, if Mr. Roosevelt had not intervened," he said. "And now the question is whether his intervention ought to prevent you doing so. I say no, because his candidacy presents a danger to this republic that you will realize."

To a crowd of several thousand composed largely of railroad men, President Taft made his appeal for the endorsement of the administration at Perth Amboy by pointing out the benefits of the railroad safety appliance act, and the workmen's compensation act. When he arrived at this point, a decorated dray awaited him, and from this improvised platform he spoke.

"The issues that Mr. Roosevelt is presenting are not the real issues of the campaign," the President charged. He is proposing an innovation to our Constitution, the recall of judicial decisions, which will shake our liberties. If he be given the nomination it will be a departure from a very wise provision, and two terms are enough. He is not talking much about a third term now, because he does not care to emphasize it. But in 1904 and 1908 he did not think a third term necessary for his fame.

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Coming down to this Jericho of party I fell instantly among politicians and prophets. It is everywhere the word that the two White House nominees will be Clark for the Democrats and Roosevelt for the Republicans. Only a few will say this for publication and in the way of an interview.

It is singular, not so say discouraging, that commonly the man of politics will only say what he does believe and does know anonymously. He reserves his name and is willing to be quoted for no more than what he turns his back upon as a principle or doubts and distrusts as a fact.

Bring up the coming conventions in talk with House man or Senator, these Washington days, and he will begin with the remark, given with an anxious emphasis: "Don't quote," and then he will go on to say that by every sign and signal smoke the opposing candidates will be Clark and Roosevelt.

Also it matters little or less whether he be for Taft or Roosevelt or Clark or Underwood or Wilson or any other of these eminent ones whose names have been set, arm in arm, with nominational honors.

You hear but the one word, Clark at Baltimore, Roosevelt at Chicago. The aggregate of prophecy is that Roosevelt will beat Taft in New Jersey, two to one or worse. There is this to be noticed, however, as foreshadowing a final Republican defeat.

Even the most radical Roosevelt shouters, all red paint, feathers and uproar, understand most thoroughly that the votes in Maryland, in Massachusetts, in Pennsylvania, in Illinois, in Ohio, were votes not so much pro-Roosevelt as anti-Taft.

The story told by the returns was not that Roosevelt carried these States, but that Taft lost them. The opinion touching New Jersey runs along similar lines. Taft will lose the State. They say that it is not pleasant these days to be in the heated Taft vicinity. He is peevish, nervous, over-strained and inclined to visit upon those about him his resentment for the misfortunes which have overtaken him.

It was not until these recent primary elections that Taft got any true impression of where he stood or rather didn't stand with the rank and file of his party. For this ignorance he blames Crane, Penrose, Hilles, Hitchcock and even Smoot.

Smoot's Attitude.

Smoot, who is not a Republican, but a Mormon, and looks to Prophet Smith rather than Mr Taft in what he politically does, is said in his support of Taft to be getting "cold feet." Looking not so much for Republican success as Mormon safety, Smoot would—so declare the inner-circle wise ones—go over to Roosevelt even now, if he only knew how, and Roosevelt gave him the chance.

Roosevelt, in his White House hour, was as tenderly careful of Mormon feeling, not to say Mormon interests, as ever Taft has been. If Taft spoke in the Salt Lake City Tabernacle, so also did Roosevelt, who was the first among the Presidents who gave the Mormons so much of his indorsing countenance.

Smoot took it for granted that Taft would be given a renomination. It never entered his Mormon head, busy over the preservation of a Payne-Aldrich tariff, so important to Mormon millions invested in our protected industries, that Roosevelt could, or would, shove Taft aside.

Smoot didn't allow for popular sentitiment and the effects of the new primary laws which many of the States had passed. And now, with Roosevelt, wide-jawed and ferocious, running up on Taft like some hound with a fat and panting hare, Smoot feels that through his blunderings he has gotten the Mormons into a mess. The Taft defeat threatens to be a Mormon defeat.

Crossing over to the Democrats, about Harmon headquarters there is no atmosphere of hope. All is respectability and pessimism. Harmon is conservative to the point of being reactionary and this is a radical year. Decidedly it is not a Harmon year. There is no real belief that he has a chance of being named.

It cannot be said that the Underwood adherents expect to land their man. None the less, they are gay and happy. Underwood is young, with a score and more of years before him. He may be heard from in 1916 or 1920 or even 1924. This, for some reason, not easy to make out by folk who trust only to the present, serves to cheer the souls of his people.

With Harmon it is different. He is sixty-three years old and so far as a presidency is involved, it is a case of now or never.

The Wilson men are harassed and fear-worried. For months there was a band wagon effect went with the canvass of Wilson. The band wagon has now gone over to Clark.

The Wilson boom is up against wind and tide—as say the sailors—and so far from making headway is hardly holding its own.

And you get the sensation of plot and intrigue about the Wilson headquarters. If upon a final nose-count of delegates it is clear that Wilson is beaten—I spoke of a pre-convention nose-count—and that Clark has him bested, he will withdraw [illegible] his strength to Bryan. Men say this has been the understanding between Bryan and Wilson from the start. It is this secret Bryan-Wilson understanding which has become the basis of what betting goes on favorable to the thought of Bryan as the Democratic nominee.

None of the cool ones believe the intrigue will work out. Bryan cannot stampede the Clark strength nor any part of it. Many insist that in event of Wilson getting out more of his delegates would go to Clark that could be given to Bryan.

Wilson-Bryan Pact.

It is preposterous, they argue, to assume that Wilson has such ownership and control over what delegates have been pledged to him as to be able to dump and deliver them—as one might a ton of coal, at the Bryan or any other door.

Once let Wilson step aside and in spite of all that he or Bryan could do it would be Clark with the rush of a storm. As between Bryan and Clark, every Harmon delegate, every Underwood delegate would be for Clark.

At the Clark headquarters there is a distinct feeling of victory on its way. Ex-Senator Dubois, who is in chief command, will not be here until Tuesday. Dubois has a genius for politics. He comes honestly by it, for his father was the managing influence that landed Lincoln in the White House.

Dubois' one politico-personal mistake was fighting the Mormons and seeking to unseat Smooth. Dubois had been told and taught that he would have the backing of the Western Senators. When it came to a showdown, Newlands of Nevada was the only Senator—except himself—in the whole region lying between the Pacific Ocean and the Western lines of the two Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to vote aainst Smoot.

Dubois did not drive out Smoot, who remained in the Senate to sit at Aldrich's right hand while the Payne-Aldrich tariff was being rapaciously hooked-and-eyed together. A little later Smoot and the Mormon church, working through the Idaho Legislature, unseated Dubois.

GOVERNOR FOSS TO TRY TO WIN VERMONT FOR THE DEMOCRATS

Governor Foss will in August, go into his home State of Vermont and make a strenuous effort to swing the State into the Democratic column, according to a statement made public today. The statement reads:

"By the first of August I shall feel that I have earned the right to give some attention to national politics.

"I intend to enter into the campaign in Vermont in dead earnest. Vermont, you know, votes the first Tuesday in September, and the effect of the result on the vote of the rest of the country will be of tremendous importance. Since the election in the fourteenth congressional district, in 1910, people have been saying 'as goes Massachusetts, so goes the nation.' It used to be said that if Vermont went below 20,000 Republican, the country would go Democratic.

"I am a native son of Vermont, and I intend to have my people up there as right on the tariff as we are here in Massachusetts."

BRYAN TO SUPPORT CLARK AS CANDIDATE AT THE CONVENTION

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 27.—Democratic leaders in this end of the State are beginning to look more favorably upon the Presidential candidacy of Speaker Champ Clark, although the State convention of the party declared for Wilson.

The friends of the Missouri man declare that the result of the Baltimore convention is no longer in doubt and that Camp Clark will be nominated on the third or fourth ballot.

The present assurance that the New York delegation will be for the Speaker, and the support he has been given by Bryan, are the two leading factors in the change of heart in this State. It is figured that no matter how much Bryan may look up as a possible candidate he will be obliged to give his support to the Missouri man at Baltimore, and it is said he may make the nominating speech for the speaker.

The Nebraskan will go to the convention as a delegate instructed for Clark, and his support is expected to win over to the Speaker uninstructed delegates favorable to Bryan.

DOCTOR TELLS OF NEW TONIC

Gives History of Its Rise to Fame.

Dr. Charles Dean Gray, who is in charge of the work of introducing the new tonic Tona Vita, in the New England states, says:

"The history of Tona Vita is interesting. Probably no other medicinal product has had such a rapid rise to fame.

"Three years ago a similar preparation was first sold to the public in France. Shortly afterwards it was sold in Germany, England, Austria, Russia, and in a very short time the demand spread over the entire European continent.

"The formula and the manufacture was controlled by two French physicians, who made no effort to introduce the tonic to the people of the United States, as the European demand alone was almost too great for them to supply.

"A number of American physicians arranged to form a company to put the tonic on the American market, and it is now being distributed to druggists on this side of the water as fast as possible.

"Tona Vita builds up people suffering from nervous debility and acts as a nerve food. The European preparation has been endorsed by many members of royalty, by the leading physicians of France and England, by writers and churchmen of note and by thousands of men and women in every walk of life.

"It is certainly the most reliable tonic ever sold to the public, and has no harmful drugs of any description in its composition. For run-down, debilitated, nervous men and women, it is really a Godsend. Nothing can compare with it as a method of overcoming this condition, except a long stay at a sanitarium, together with strict attention to proper rest and diet.

"The great mass of the public have neither time nor money for sanitariums, and it is these people in particular who will find Tona Vita a boon.

"While the nations of today are all becoming debilitated by modern life, no country in the world equals the United States in this respect. Nine out of ten people in our country work at high pressure six days out of seven, and are too nervous to relax on Sunday. This is disastrous to health in general and the nervous system in particular, therefore the physicians who control Tona Vita in America think the preparation is more needed and will meet with greater success here, than anywhere else.

"The tonic is now in the hands of leading druggists and can be obtained by any druggist from wholesalers. It is certain that New England people in general and Bostonians in particular, will find this remarkable tonic a wonderful benefit to them. Only those who have taken it can fully realize what it does for those suffering from the conditions described above."—Advt.

VOTE ON TWO CLARK TICKETS

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Democratic primaries of the District of Columbia are being held today. It is a "Jim Crow" primary, all of Washington's 90,000 negroes being barred from the polls.

In the battle for the six delegates to the Baltimore convention there are three tickets, two instructed for Speaker Clark and one for uninstructed delegates. Other candidates have no entries in the fiid. Charges of fraud and "soap box" primaries are rife. Anyone, Republican or Democrat, is said to be free to cast a ballot. Official endorsement of Champ Clark's managers is claimed by two "slates."

Voting begins at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The polls will close at 8 o'clock and belated returns are expected with two contests predicted.

SETBACK FOR HARMON IN BALLOT DECISION

COLUMBUS, O., May 27.—Governor Harmon's contest for a solid Ohio delegation to the Baltimore Democratic convention met with a severe setback today, when Secretary of State Graves, as head of the election machinery in the State, held that the State convention could no impose the unit rule on the twenty Wilson delegates from the congressional districts.

TENNESSEE MOB LYNCHES A NEGRO

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 27.—A mob of white men early today seized "Jake" Samuels, a negro, charged with attacking a white woman, took him into a vacant field and riddled his body with bullets. Over 100 shots were fired at the negro after he had been shot to death.

ROOT WILL STICK; OPPOSED BY CLAPP

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Senator Elihu Root of New York, who has been named temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention by a sub-committee of the Republican National Committee, has issued a statement saying there is no foundation for the story that he contemplates declining to act as temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention. United States Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota probably will be a candidate for temporary chairman, in place of Root. According to McHarg and Pinchot, Clapp is favored by Colonel Roosevelt.

GRAND TRUNK FIGHT DELAYED

The Grand Trunk forecast today at the State House indicated that the Board of Railroad Commissioners would not be ready until late this afternoon or perhaps tomorrow with their reply to the questions raised by Senator George Holden Tinkham, that many other Senators will have many other amendments to offer, that somebody will insist upon seeing these amendments in print before the Senate is asked to vote upon them, and that, therefore, the big fight on the Grand Trunk must go over until tomorrow.

It is not impossible, it was said, that the Senate will advance the bill a stage by ordering it to a third reading. The proposed amendments may be discussed as well at that final stage.

Everything else at the State House seemed today to have suddenly taken second place to the sensational holding up of the Grand Trunk bill in the Senate.

The Grand Trunk bill was not reported favorably by the Railroad Committee until last Monday. The public hearings closed as far back as March 28. On that day the Railroad Committee took the bill "under advisement."

On Wednesday last, the House of Representatives passed the bill by what amounted to a unanimous vote, without a roll call.

On Thursday the bill reached the Senate. And there it has stuck fast ever since.

Raised Point of Order.

Of the early amendments the most important was that suggested by Senator Francis J. Horgan of Dorchester. Senator Horgan suggested a new "compartment" in the bill which the Senate would call "Part III.," and which would comprise the Public Utilities Commission demand of Governor Foss. It is generally understood in the Senate that Senator Horgan acted upon the request of the Governor.

Senator Harry N. Stearns of Cambridge promptly raised the point of order against the Horgan amendment that it was "beyond the scope of the Grand Trunk petition." President Greenwood has sustained this point and has ruled the Public Utilities Commission amendment "out of order."

Then came Senator George Holden Tinkham of Boston, with a request that the Board of Railroad Commissioners be requested to say whether, in their opinion, the "bonding" sections of the Grand Trunk bill are in accord with the public policy of Massachusetts; whether they are fair to the people.

These provisions provide that a railroad corporation—any railroad corporation, the Boston & Maine or the Boston & may issue bonds to the amount of twice the capital stock.

UP TO THIS TIME THE AMOUNT OF BONDS HAS BEEN LIMITED TO THE AMOUNT OF THE CAPITAL STOCK.

And in one word this is the present position of the Grand Trunk bill in the Legislature. It has been passed by the House practically unanimously and is held up in the Senate waiting a word from the Railroad Commissioners.

Waiting for Reply.

Early today there appeared to be little likelihood that the Railroad Commissioners would get around to a reply before tomorrow. It was said that Commissioners Bishop and White have both been out of town since Senator Tinkham propounded his inquiry on Friday. Only Commissioner Macleod has been able to give it any consideration.

Commissioner Bishop was expected to reach the office today. Commissioner White was not within reach.

"From what I have heard," Senator Tinkham said today to the AMERICAN, "several amendments will be offered. Personally, I think it would be proper to have all of them introduced today and then laid over to be printed. Then, when we hear from the Railroad Commissioners, we shall be in fine shape to go through to the end.

"I am frank to say that there are two things in the Grand Trunk bill, as we have it before us today, that in my opinion require amendment.

"One of these is in relation to the bond issue. This, of course, is a very important matter, although to many it may savor of the technical.

"The policy of Massachusetts up to this time has been to allow no railroad corporation to issue more bonds than the amount of the capital stock.

"As a consequence of this policy the railroads, when they have borrowed money, have not issued mortgages, secured by the railroad, but have merely put out promises to pay, or 'debentures.'

"The one important thing, to all of us, is that the Grand Trunk proceed immediately with the construction of its lines from the New Hampshire border to the port of Boston. This is the through trunk line, the line which will bring business to Boston.

"So I am very firmly of the opinion that we should make it a condition of the building of these lines that the line from New Hampshire to Boston must be built, and if the Grand Trunk means business with Boston and the port of Boston they will not object to such a condition."

ROLFE'S BAND AT THEATRE GARDEN OPENING TONIGHT

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

There was a dress rehearsal by B. A. Rolfe and his Symphony Band at the National Theatre Gardens last night.

The Gardens open officially tonight, but Mr. Rolfe assembled an audience of scientists, society leaders, politicians and others to demonstrate a few ideas on color as applied to music.

Rolfe's Band is very high toned. It wears dress suts, instead of a regular uniform, and is augumented by two bass fiddles and kettledrums, in addition to the customary brass instruments.

Mr. Rolfe, himself, leads with a long white baton and a motion that sometimes reminds you of Nikisch and sometimes of Sousa. His band plays everything from ragtime to Grieg.

As regards color, Mr. Rolfe's ideas are rather simple. He uses blue lights for sad music, red lights for martial airs and white lights for merry melodies. He also has pictures thrown on a screen to help the illusion of the music.

Colonel Dick Fields, who was in one of the boxes, representing the city of Boston, was inspired by this color scheme to suggest that when the band played "Sweet Adeline," Mayor Fitzgerald's picture by thrown on the screen.

The band seems to be an excellent organization and Rolfe is an inspiring leader. Miss Helena Morrill sang an aria from "Thais," in a voice which, despite nervousness, revealed fine qualities, and Signor Torello performed wonderfully upon the double bass.

Moving pictures, ensemble singing by the band, and other novel features were introduced.

The National Theatre has been transformed by the substitution of tables in the orchestra and boxes for the ordinary rows of seats, and is both cool and attractive.

HOW SERVANTS GAVE UP MONEY

Miss Nora Lavene, employed as a maid at No. 74 Bay State road, told today how she and many other Boston working girls fel. victims to the latest get-rich-quick scheme which was conducted by a woman palmist and her husband.

Harry Moore, the man in the case, was arrested in Springfield and is held in Boston. Mrs. Frances Moore, his wife, known as "Madame Bronson," of No. 165 Massachusetts evenue, is missing. Moore was locked up in Charles street jail today in default of $6,000 bail.

The girls were induced to give up their savings for investment in a fictitious Arizona copper company, with the promise that they would receive immense returns on their money. The palmist saw "copper" in their hands.

Miss Lavene was promised $1,000 return on the $500 that she gave up. She wanted to make a trip to her home in Ireland and gave up the money. She said she knew another girl who had been victimized out of $2,000.

Saw Copper and Gold.

"I was asked to go and see 'Madame Bronson' by a friend of mine," said Miss Lavene. "I was told that I could make money out of what I had saved in the savings bank, where I was getting only three and a half per cent.

"Then I heard that other servant girls were going to her and that they had made some money.

"When I first saw her she met me in her apartments elegantly dressed and her apartments were well furnished. She told me that she owned the house where she lived.

"She began talking to me and saying that I should not work so hard in a warm kitchen. With what money I had I could make enough to live without working so hard. Well, I thought that if I could only return to Ireland and see my old friends and relatives, it would be a great treat. After I told her that I had money saved up, she said, 'Come into this little room.' I went with her into a small room where she talked very secretly with me.

"Let me see your hand, she said:

"I held out the palm of my hand. She looked at it and then in a few moments exclaimed, 'You have an excellent hand. You have fortune in your hand. I see copper and gold there. It is very few that you see with such a good hand as yours.'

"Then she told me a lot of other things.

Gave Up Savings.

"'Why do you work so hard in that kitchen? Let me help you to make some money. No one will know anything about it. How much have you in the bank?' she finally asked.

"'I have about $500,' I said.

"'Well with this, you can easily clear $1,000 in six months,' was her reply.

"Then she talked of how other servant girls were making money in the Back Bay, and after a while I told her that I would draw my money out of the bank. So I did. I signed a paper and gave my bankbook to her husband.

"Oh, I see what a fool I was! But other girls thought that she was all right.

"After paying her the money she gave me some long pieces of paper that she called stock.

"I hope that they have caught her. She ought to be hanged. Oh, the smooth way that she talked and the lies that she told!

"I know I am a fool. But I wanted to visit my people in the old country. I know one girl in the Back Bay who lost $2,000. If we girls could get at her for a few moments, there would be no need of a trial."

Harry Moore, thirty-three years old, the husband of Mrs. Frances Moore, worked the scheme in getting the money out of the savings bank. He has been arrested in Springfield, but his wife is still at large.

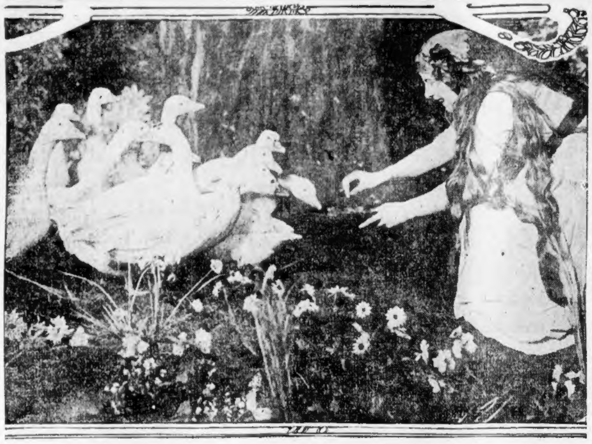
Miss Farrar Uses Live Geese in Fairy Opera ◆◆ Charms Berlin Audience in "Konigskender"

MISS GERALDINE FARRAR AS THE GOOSE MAID IN OPERA "KONIGSKINDER."



Levanzin's Appetite Starts Food Famine

Man Scientifically Starved Keeping the Cooks Busy in Bridgewater.

A food famine is threatened in the town of Bridgewater as a result of the presence there of Dr. Agostino Levanzin and his phenomenal appetite.

Levanzin is actually eating up the food supply of the whole town and the butcher and the baker and the grocer are increasing their orders in Boston in hopes of catching up with the demand. The cook of Dr. Stedman's Lake View Convalescent Hospital in Bridgewater is on the brink of mutiny, for the appetite of Dr. Levanzin chains her to her stove.

"I am like a famished dog," explains the man who broke the world's record for fasting. "I cannot eat too much."

Since Monday last Dr. Levanzin has eaten seven meals a day. Dr. and Mrs. Stedman and Mrs. Skinner, the matron of the hospital, are in a continual state of amazement at the food consumption of the starved man.

In five days he gained twelve pounds. He was reduced to 101 pounds when he left the Carnegie Laboratory in Roxbury, and was in such a state of emaciation and weakness he could hardly walk.

Yesterday Dr. Levanzin spent the afternoon rowing a boat on the lake, on the banks of which the hospital stands. Every now and then he went ashore for refreshment.

When he stepped on the scales yesterday morning he weighed 114 pounds. In one week he had gained thirteen pounds.

(Further details of Professor Levansin's fast on Page 4.)

COLORED POST'S RANKS TOO THIN FOR A PARADE

For the first time in its forty years of existence, Robert A. Bell Post, No. 134, G. A. R., the colored post, was not able to muster enough members for a street parade when it attended church at the St. Paul Baptist Church on Camden street. Today the post buried another of its members.

The church was decorated by Adjutant Isaac S. Mullen and a few comrades.

The sermon was by the pastor, the Rev. C. J. Johnson. The services of the G. A. R. was performed by the post, assisted by the Women's Relief Corps.

Y., who returned from Europe on board the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, was killed by falling from a window on the eighth floor of the San Jacinto apartmenes, in East Sixtieth street. The police reported Mrs. Heiden's death as suicide, but relatives declared that it was accidental.

BARTENDERS INVITE MINISTER TO SPEAK

The Rev. Dr. George E. Stokes today received an invitation to address the Boston Bartenders' Union on "The Saloon Problem" at its educational hour session, Sunday, June 9. This week every member will receive a ballot regarding the question of parading Labor Day and also on the question of increasing the local benefits.

Boston Singer as the Goose Maid in Humperdinck's Opera Given Ovation in German Capital.

BERLIN, May 27.—Miss Geraldine Farrar, the Boston prima donna, captivated a brilliant audience, last evening at the Royal Opera House when she appeared with five trained geese in the role of the goose maid in Humperdinck's fairy opera, "Konigskinder."

Property geese have always been used heretofore in the Berlin version of "Konigskinder," but Miss Farrar introduced the real article. For a whole week she had been engaged in training the birds, and their perfect conduct on the stage showed that Miss Farrar was skillful as an animal trainer as well as a goose-maid or rare talents.

With Miss Farrar appeared Herman Jadlwker, always a favorite with German audiences and both, in excellent voice, were accorded a great reception. It was their first appearance in Europe in the fairy opera. The elite audience was unanimous in its verdict that the Metropolitan stars had given the most superb performance of "Konigskinder" ever heard in Berlin.

Ovation for Miss Farrar

Each had to respond to numerous curtain calls, which became an ovation at the finish. Miss Farrar's admirers found her a more charming singer and actress than ever. They noted particularly that she had "shrunken" since she was last seen in Berlin.

"Koenigskinder" means "Children of kings."

It is a three-act opera, taken from a German folk tale, and was given its premiere at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, December 27, 1910. Emperor William wanted "Koenigskinder" for Berlin, but New York spoke..

The tender story of the "Koenigskinder," with its shades of happiness and pathos, found a strong response in the musical creativeness of Humperdinck, who, throughout the opera laid a strong groundwork of convincing harmonies that follow in their pulsations every sentiment of the story.

Story of the Opera.

The plot is as follows: The son of a king goes in quest of adventures. He finds in the Hella forest, in the hut of a very wise witch, a goose-girl, who is an enchanted princess. He falls in love with her and offers her his golden crown, and they would fain run away, but the witch prevents her, and the prince departs in anger. The citizens of Hellabrun send out a fiddler, a wood-chopper and a broommaker to ask the witch where they may find a king. Only the fiddler understands her answer. He recognizes in the goose-girl the daughter of a king, and takes her, released by prayer from the spell, to Hellabrun.

HALF-CENT PIECE STRONGLY OPPOSED BY LABOR UNIONS

The introduction of a half-cent piece as the unit of currency in the United States is opposed by the labor men, the Typographical Union, the Boston Theatrical Stage Employes' Union and the Newsboys' Union all passing resolutions condemning it.

The coinage of half-cents would injure the well-being of the newsboys, it was declared at the meeting of Boston Newsboys' Union.

The return of former Governor Curtis Guild to Boston was reported. As he is an honorary member of the union and one of its warmest friends, the union extended him an invitation to attend one of its meetings in the near future and also sent him word "that the boys would do all they could to help him get elected to any office he sought."

Cuban Scare Bares Navy Man's Romance

Miss Adelaide Mitchell of Portland, Famous Beauty, to Wed Lieutenant Fegan of Battleship Florida.

The Cuban troubles were responsible for the hurried announcement, at the Hotel Vendome, of the engagement of Miss Adelaide Loring Mitchell of Portland, Me., to Lieutenant Joseph Charles Fegan, U. S. M. C. of the U. S. S. Florida.

The wedding which is to be celebrated during the coming autumn, will be the outcome of a romance which began when they met at a dinner aboard the Florida. Lieutenant Fegan is expecting his ship will be ordered to sail daily.

Miss Mitchell, who is descended from a famous Massachusetts family, is a graduate of Portland High School, and is now attending the private school of Dr. Dudley Sargent in Cambridge. Miss Mitchell is noted for her brilliancy and her beauty.

Lieutenant Fegan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Fegan of Dallas, Tex., and is an officer of marines. The engagement was announced by Mrs. Mitchell at a tea given in her daughter's honor at the Vendome. Mrs. Mitchell was assisted in receiving by her daughters, famous beauties both.

LIFT BAN FROM PUCCINI WORKS

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

PARIS, May 27.—From Puccini and from the New York representatives of the Ricordis, I have learned that all difficulties between them regarding the production next season of Puccini's works at the Metropolitan have been settled.

"La Boheme," "Tosca," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Madama Butterfly" and possibly "Manon Lescaut" will therefore again be in the Metropolitan repertory. It is still uncertain, however, whether they will be included or excluded by the Chicago Opera Company.

At Work on Light Opera

Puccini tells me he has already begun writing his new three-act Spanish opera "Anima Allegra."

"In September," said the composer, "I may go to Spain to get local color. I do not attach so much importance to this work as to some others. It will be rather light, in the same vein, maybe, as 'La Boheme,' and I am composing it largely for my own amusement. When completed it will be produced in Italy. The liberetto, by Quintero, deals with the irruption into the dull mansion of an old marquise, of a young niece, full of the joy of life, who wins the love of the marquise's son.

"In the second act she scandalizes her family by attending the marriage of two Andalusian gypsies, but in the last act all ends happily with the wedding of the heroine and her sweetheart.

Is Attracted by "Hannele."

"I have not yet found the theme I need for my next serious opera. My mind, however, has been running lately on Gerhardt Hauptmann's beautiful dream play 'Hannele.' Although sombre, it attracts me strongly. It is emotional, and the public loves emotion. Unhappily Hauptmann has authorized the French composer, Erlanger, to use 'Hannele' for an opera. I don't know whether I could get similar authorization.

Puccini is greatly interested in the stage methods of Max Reinhardt, which, he thinks, might with advantage be adopted in the production of some kinds of opera.

MGR. LAVELLE HALTS PANIC BY A PRAYER

NEW YORK, May 27.—The calmness of Monsignor Lavelle averted a panic among 3,000 spectators when a platform collapsed at the blessing of the foundation of the new St. Clement's Church. Fifty persons went down with the platform, some being seriously injured. Monsignor Lavelle continued the prayer he was delivering when the crash occurred.

New Tuberculosis Remedy Based on Medicine

BELIEVE REPORTS WERE 'DOCTORED' IN STEEL TRUST CASE

NEW YORK, May 27.—That the government believes reports purporting to show the relative capacity of the American Bridge Company and its independent competitors have been "doctored" was strongly indicated today when the hearing in the government's dissolution suit against the United States Steel Corporation went on here.

Pervical Roberts, Jr., former president of the American Bridge Company and now a director of the United States Steel Corporation and a member of the corporation's finance committee, was called to the stand. He read statistics from a report showing the productive capacities of the American Bridge Company (now a Steel Trust adjunct) and its competitors from 1904 to 1911.

J. M. Dickinson, special counsel for the government, forced him to admit that the reports he was reading were copies and not originals, and that they might be unauthentic.

METHODISTS TAKE UP THE ELECTION OF CHURCH EDITORS

MINNEAPOLIS, May 27.—Scheduled to adjourn Wednesday, the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has been in session here since May 1, began today on a business grind.

Chief among matters to come up is the election of the editors of the strong church papers, of which the principal one is the Christian Advocate of New York. For years Dr. J. M. Buckley, who is known in the church as the "bishop-maker," has been in charge of the paper. There is considerable discussion among the candidates as to whether he will continue in his present position.

"WILL CONVICT DARROW SURE".

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 27.—Clarence Darrow will be convicted by the dictagraph, asserted Captain Robert J. Foster, chief investigator for the National Erectors' Association, today.

Foster is the man who, at the time of the McNamara trial, installed in the Hotel Hayward a dictagraph which he claims recorded the conversations held between Darrow and John R. Harrington, assistant counsel with the Chicago attorney in the dynamite case. He had beeen sent here by the erectors and was unknown in connection with the case. He engaged a room adjoining that of Harrngton's in the hotel and, taking advantage of Harrington's absence, installed his dictagraph and connected it with a receiver in his own room. He he had two stenographers. Foster asserts the men secured and recorded every conversation carried on between the two McNamara counsel.

"In that case it was a general conspiracy to bribe as many of the jury as possible," Foster declared. "They knew what they were trying to do, and they meant to do it. As for Clarence Darrow, every means of escape has been closed tight."

THOUSANDS SEE CIRCUS PARADE

Thousands of Greater Boston people, young and old, today lined the streets through which Barnum & Bailey's circus passed. The route was; from old American League Grounds, through Massachusetts, to Columbus avenue to Park square, Boylston, Tremont, Charles streets, through Park square again, and thence out Columbus avenue to Massachusetts avenue, and then back to the grounds.

One of the innovations this year will be "The Spectacle of Cleopatra," pronounced the most brilliant spectacle put under canvas. Opening the performances, this sets a new standard in circus "stunts.' Then follow a rapid and dazzling succession of old-time and new circus acts.

Great interest was aroused among the performers by a challenge put up to Clyde Ingalls, the side show manager, Eddie Garvey of "The Fascinating Widow" company, himself an old circus man, wagered that he could be more "persuasively eloquent" than Ingalls in making the side show "opening," and as a result they are both going to have a tryout some day this week to determine which is the best ballyho man.

From the moment "Happy Jack" Snellen, veteran canvas man, started measuring off the lot by planting those wire pins flying red and blue pennants until the last dish was washed after nearly 1,500 circus people had eaten, the arrival of the Barnum & Bailey "greatest show on earth" was an attraction that, all told, several thousand persons found it just impossible to resist.

After three weeks of the muddiest, rainiest weather that it had ever encountered, the circus reached Boston from Pittsfield in sunshine and warm weather, building its "white city" on the old Huntington avenue baseball brounds for a week of afternoon and evening performances.

The "flying squadron," consisting of the cook tent, stables, canvas wagons and baggage, reached the Huntington avenue freight yards, and inside of a half hour were being set up. In the next section came the big top, side shows and more baggage.

But the greatest interest, so far as the spectators were concerned, centered in the arrival of the third and fourth sections, consisting of the parade wagons, performers and the ring and lead animals.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT GERMAN SCHOOL

The German School of the United German Societies of Boston and Suburbs will hold its annual closing exercises at Arbeiter Hall, in Jamaica Plain, on Decoration Day at 2:30 p. m. "Die Zauberflote" ("The Magic Flute"), a fairy tale in three acts, will be given by the scholars, who were coached by Mrs. Marie Van Hall, a member of the Deutsche Teatergesellschaft.

MISS LITCHFIELD, SOUTH BOSTON CANDIDATE.

The AMERICAN'S Princess contest is now on in earnest. The printing in Sunday's AMERICAN of the list of candidates entered served to stir up many others to rush in new candidates today.

In next Sunday's AMERICAN will be printed the standing of the candidates. This will be the first indication of the comparative strength of the various candidates in the contest. This week should be a big one on that account. The friend of every candidate is anxious to have their favorite well up in the race when the first tabulated list appears.

If you have not nominated your candidate yet you had better get busy. The sooner one gets into the race the better will be their chance to capture one of the prizes. There are 300 prizes in all, so there are sure to be 300 delighted girls in New England.

PATROLMAN BRAVES REVOLVER FIRE TO ARREST HIS MAN

The bravery of Patrolman James M. Breen of the West Broadway, South Boston, police station, in dashing through a door, through which a man was shooting with a revolver, and then capturing the man after a desperate struggle, was told in court today.

The prisoner, Pasquale Cristalo of Revere, was charged with assault with intent to kill, upon Sabatino Fontalanova of West Broadway, South Boston. The shooting took place at the latter's home. It is said the trouble was concerning a fifteen-cent debt.

Cristalo fired at his host, it is claimed. Fontalanova darted out into the hall, grasped the knob of the front room door.

Patrolman Breen heard the shots and darted up the stairs. He ordered Fontalanova to release his grip on the knob, and the door swung suddenly in, allowing Cristalo to fall upon the floor.

As he was regaining his feet the policeman knocked the weapon from his hand, and they rolled down the stairs. Patrolman Breen landed on top at the bottom and dragged his man down the other flight of stairs.

GRAND ARMY MEN HOLD MEMORIAL SUNDAY SERVICES

Every Grand Army man able to march turned out to attend the services observing Memorial Sunday. Every post attended church practically in a body. The graves of comrades will be decorated next Thursday. In most cases members of the Women's Relief Corps, the Sons and Daughters of Veterans and other allied organizations marched with the old solders. Troop A of the Lancers marched to the Union Congregational Church with the veterans.

Some ministers likened present political conditions to those immediately preceding the Civil War, and said that men as sturdy as those of '61 were needed now to fight the battle for the right.

Before 600 Grand Army men, Troop A, several ladies' auxiliaries and a detachment of the United Spanish War Veterans, at the Union Congregational Church, the Rev. A. A. Stockdale preached on the "American Idea."

IVES REPLIES TO MELLEN ATTACK

David O. Ives, head of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Clifton H. Dwinnell, vice-president of the First National Bank, and Bernard J. Rothwell, a former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, were among those coming forward today to deny charges made by President Mellen of the New Haven and Boston & Maine that he had "dickered for a week over a petty loan," and that "Boston bankers were always looking for a rake-off."

Mr. Ives branded as absolutely untrue President Mellen's charge that he had been sending out circulars to gather complaints against the New Haven Railroad to be sent to the Interstate Commerce Commission. He declared the New Haven head must have known it was untrue when he said it.

Mr. Ives closed his explaination of the circular incident by declaring that the Boston & Maine has become even more inefficient since Mr. Mellen obtained control.

"I believe that the Chamber of Commerce has no reason for making any apologies for the course it has taken in trying to find out what the matter is with the service on the Boston & Maine road," said Mr. Ives. "I am free to admit that it is very difficult for me, sitting in my office, as Mr. Mellen describes me to be, to be able to make an actual diagnosis of the disease, but that there is some serious disturbance no one can honestly deny, and it is my belief that there is no better way to find out the trouble than to have a thorough investigation made by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Must Serve the People."

"If such an investigation is made, I shall do my part in it—without one particle of prejudice against the Boston & Maine Road or the New Haven Railroad. In order to get the full benefit of these roads they must be managed in the interest of the people living along their lines.

"Mr. Mellen has had the same control of the Boston & Maine through its stock as the Boston & Maine had of the Maine Central, or the New York Central and the Pennsylvania system of their subsidiaries. He has exercised that right in many notable ways. If, therefore, as he himself admits, the Boston & Maine service has not improved, it cannot be for lack of sufficient control. It must be because of it."

Mr. Mellen says he got $12,000,000 in New York in three hours," declared Mr. Dwinnell. "Well, he could get it in Boston in one hour. The only trouble would be his idea of the proper rate of interest. I know that within three years he has borrowed $20,000,000 in Boston. He got $10,000,000 in one lump sum. And he never had to wait over night for his money."

President Mellen during the course of his interview said:

"The worst will be over in about a year and a half. The great need of the Boston & Maine is for shops and yards and new equipment, and we are supplying those deficiencies as fast as we can.

"Millions of dollars have been spent and millions more will be spent to put the road on its feet. It is a tremendous task, but with hard work and a little patience everything will come out right.

Would "Surprise Enemies."

"The New Haven is running 2,000 passenger trains a day. If only 5 per cent. of them are off time that amounts to 100 trains a day. If you were told that 100 New Haven trains were late yesterday you would probably regard it as a severe indictment of the road. But I should like to have you point out to me some one who is doing business with 95 per cent. perfection.

MELLEN AND IVES ON THE B. & M.

What Mellen Says:	D. O. Ives' Reply:
"We have borrowed $50,000,000 for the New Haven system in the last year. We have just furnished the Boston & Maine $12,000,000. Imagine what might happen if we had to depend on Boston for the money to meet such obligations. We want to do big things for Boston and Massachusetts, and we will unless our hands are tied. My ambition is to make the New Haven one of the greatest railroad systems i nthe world, and to make it serve the best interests of Boston, Massachusetts and all New England."	"Mr. Mellen has had the same control of the Boston & Maine through its stock as the Boston & Maine had of the Maine Central, or the New York Central and the Pennsylvania system of their subsidiaries. He has exercised that right in many notable ways. If, therefore, as he himself admits, the Boston & Maine service has not improved, it cannot be for lack of sufficient control. It must be because of it."

BOSTON LODGE OF ELKS TO DECORATE GRAVES THURSDAY

The 2,000 members of Boston Lodge, No. 10, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, are working daily to make the Memorial Day exercises, on Thursday, the most impressive in the history of the lodge. These exercises as usual, will be held at Elks' Rest in Mt. Hope Cemetery. The orator of the day will be Mayor J. Edward Barry, of Cambridge.

No grave, not even in the remotest church yard from Maine to California, that holds the remains of a brother of Boston Lodge, will be forgotten. Captain Irvin, of the Laconia of the Cunard line, has consented to cast wreaths into the Atlantic in mid-ocean, in memory of those lost at sea.

"Pink Pajamas" in Dr. James' Message

Late Professor, in Spirit Writing, Proves Identity, Says Hyslop, by Describing Garments.

Spirit messages from Professor William James of Harvard University, who died August 26, 1910, refer to "pink pajamas." Dr. James H. Hyslop, secretary of the American Society for Psychical Research, says in his report that appears in the current number of the society's journal.

"This feature, while it may be disconcerting in referring to trivial things, quite foreign to matters expected to interest such philosophic minds," says Dr. Hyslop, "is precisely what should be looked for, in establishing one's personal identity."

Inquiry revealed the fact that Professor James had such a garment once, and the inference is drawn that knowledge of this fact would go far to identify him.

In the summary of his experiments Dr. Hyslop gives some of the conversations with the James spirit in detail, and describes the results of many sittings with Mrs. Smead and Mrs. Chenoweth, the two mediums who figure most prominently in the experiments.

Mrs. Smead lives in a mountain district in the Southern States, thirteen miles from a railroad, and had never known Professor James, yet on the day following Professor James' death, before any newspaper or ordinary report could reach her, she received, he says, an unmistakable message from Professor James. Mrs. Chenoweth had known Professor James in life, having met him at his Summer home in Chocorua, N. H.

MRS. FARRAR HOME AGAIN

NEW YORK, May 27.—Mrs. Frederick Percival Farrar, wife of the disgraced clergyman whose appointment as chaplain in ordinary and domestic chaplain to the King and as honorary domestic chaplain to Queen Alexandra was cancelled last November by King George, has at last returned to her relatives here.

Richard Harding Davis, the author, and Charles Belmont Davis, her brothers, met her at the pier and hurried her away in an automobile, en route for the Davis farm at Mount Kisco.

Charges of the gravest nature were made against Chaplain Farrar on November 22.

"There has been so much said already, and it is so distressing that I do not wish to talk about it," was Mrs. Farrar's only comment. The former chaplain is in British Columbia.

Two score of new members were initiated.

THE SENATORSHIP

Mr. Politician:

In the pledges coming to me for the Senatorship are scores of questions from you. With that cheap-John insolence which so well becomes your vocation, you ask: "What do you mean by butting into this Senatorial contest?" Whatever else can be said of you, this must be admitted—when you ask questions you ask them with an eight-cornered bluntness equalled only by the warted conscience which conceives them and the nerve which brings them forth.

Mr. Politician:

I know you and you know me. For over a quarter of a century I have "butted" into your game; sometimes to aid you in your contests with that far more dangerous and infinitely more contemptible "critter" of public life, the smug, amateur class-reform hypocrite; oftentimes to amuse myself; more times to hold you up to the public areek with the loot of your sertice into the hives of business and the homes of the industrious voters. We not only know each other, but we like each other. I like you just as the boy at the fair likes the prize sow which roots and grunts and sloshes round in its wallow—you are always picturesque and often interesting. You like me—when your wallet needs sweetening.

Mr. Politician:

Now, let me tell you what I mean by "butting" into this Massachusetts Senatorial contest, and in a way that should obviate the necessity of further inquiry. The politicians of Massachusetts, like those of other States, at the orders of the national political bosses, who received their orders from the brigands who have pillaged the people of billions and who are directly responsible for the present HIGH COST LIVING—the System—have brazenly usurped the people's right to name their own Senators and have sent to Washington men who earn their seats by doing everything in their power to make and perpetuate HIGH COST LIVING.

Mr. Politician:

In spite of the most strenuous opposition of the politicians, their bosses, and their bosses' bosses, the day is here when the American people are awake to the coming of one of two events: The SMASHING OF HIGH COST LIVING OR THE RAWEST, REDDEST REVOLUTION THE WORLD, CIVILIZED OR UNCIVILIZED, HAS EVER WITNESSED—awake to the fact that they have amongst them two public characters who have the honesty, courage, ability and the monumental ambition to undertake the job of SMASHING HIGH COST LIVING—Theodore Roosevelt and William Jennings Bryan.

Mr. Politician:

At just this time the American people have concluded to give one or the other of these public characters the opportunity to show how far honesty, courage, ability and monumental ambition can go in dragging into the open the now entrenched and well nigh almighty band of ruthless dollar kings who have exploited the American people to the edge of the precipice. At just this time the State of Massachusetts—the breeding place of cure-alls of oppression—has determined to contribute her part in the overthrow by giving her people the opportunity of having in the Senate, when the fighting begins, a man who will goad that body to action.

Mr. Politician:

At just this time the people of Massachusetts are saying with unmistakable voice, that if politicians, their bosses and their bosses' bosses, know what is good for their physical and mental health they will get to the cyclone cellar in record time, there to remain until the blow is over. At just this stage, knowing what has made HIGH COST LIVING and knowing WHAT WILL SMASH IT, and being willing to make a campaign which will show the people of Massachusetts what they have been up against and just how they can get away from what they are up against, I have concluded to offer my services for this lively and maybe jolly job.

Mr. Politician:

Eight years ago, in the "Frenzled Finance" campaign, I took on the task of letting daylight into the stronghold of the pirates—into the mean, nasty pillaging of the life insurance widows and orphans. I took it on single-handed. I asked and accepted no aid from you or your bosses or your bosses' bosses, and after long days and nights of effort, and the expenditure of over 2 million dollars, I had the satisfaction of knowing—because the whole world told me—that I had been largely instrumental in bringing about the present upheaval. That was all I got; that was all I wanted.

Mr. Politician:

I believe the present job is as ping-pong to football compared with that one. Then I was almost alone in the muckraking field. Today muckraking is a contagion. I believe that with the expenditure of a few months' work and some money, I can bring about a condition which will allow me to look on from the United States Senate chamber, while the politicians, their bosses and their bosses' bosses, panic-stricken, plead for their lives while turning back oceans of their dirty loot to those from whom it was stolen, the mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of those who in the past have been marched like galley slaves to the ballot box, there to ratify the pillage and to legalize its continuation.

Mr. Politician:

I believe this so strongly that I am willing to pledge myself to the voters of Massachusetts, that if they want me for this job I'll enlist without asking for or accepting from any politician, his boss or his boss' boss, any assistance of any sort.

Mr. Politician:

Now let me ask you a question: Have you stopped to consider the nerve you have displayed in asking me why I was butting into this Senatorship contest, "without first seeing us"? Your brass-bound insolence would be breath-taking if one did not know you!

Here we are in the midst of an upheaval so great that the Aldriches and the Cranes take to the woods; so great that you and your bosses and your bosses' bosses dare not attempt to balk the will of the people of Massachusetts for their own appointment of their Senators.

And what do you do? Look about for an ideal statesman such as Congressman McCall, a man who has always done honor, and who always will do honor to any office in the gift of the people? No! You roll up your sleeves, throw down your suspenders, and, as of yore, start in to blatherskite the voters into sending to Washington for this big job any one of a dozen of your most barnacled political Jo-Jos!

Mr. Politician:

Will you never learn—is it possible that you must be knocked in the head and drawn and quartered by the people before you awaken to the fact that your day and your job have gone? Barring that energetic worker for the people, Mayor Fitzgerald, who for six years served the State in Congress, and for I don't know how long as Mayor of Boston, Curtis Guild, and one or two others of ability, there has not been a name mentioned that is not weaved and woofed with the gangrene of politics. And yet you brazenly ask me why I "butt in"!

Mr. Politician:

Put this in your pipe and smoke it, and as you smoke, ponder. I have the pledges of over 55,000 earnest voters of Massachusetts, and I am preparing to put into the hands of every Massachusetts voter a document and a to-be-signed pledge, to be followed by others which should increase the number to a majority of all the votes of the State. Should I fail to get a majority, I now have sufficient pledges to enable me to throw the nomination to another, such as Congressman McCall, or, if necessary, the election to that able Democrat, Mayor Fitzgerald—enough under any circumstances to beat out any one of your old barnacled politicians, the sort that admits no allegiance to any but the national political bosses and their bosses, the black-hearted pillagers who employ them—the System.

Mr. Politician:

Now you have my answer to your question, Why I am butting into this Senatorship contest "without first seeing us." I am butting in that I may go to Washington to goad the Senate into doing its part to SMASH HIGH COST LIVING when Roosevelt makes his charge on that citadel of the System; or, if that be impossible, to assist in sending there a warrior, be he Republican or Democrat, to balk you in sending one of your kind. Oh, yes, I know your argument that as a Republican I would never dare to ask my Republican supporters to vote for a Fitzgerald or any other Democrat. Bah! I would ask them to vote for the devil himself, as against one of your kind, provided his satanic majesty would first make public pledge that he would assist Roosevelt, or, for that matter, Bryan, in doing the one thing which must be done during the next four years to avoid raw, red revolution—SMASH HIGH COST LIVING.

Mr. Politician:

Bear in mind that while I have always been the staunchest kind of a Republican, I financed the campaigns of one of the strongest and ablest defenders of the oppressed in Massachusetts, the late John B. Moran, a Democrat; that I also advocated, through advertisements, the first election of our present Democratic Governor, Eugene N. Foss; and that I advocated and helped to finance the election of that splendid American, one of the greatest since Lincoln, the late Governor Johnson of Minnesota, and that while doing so I never wavered in my support of Roosevelt and Republicans who measure up to the standard.

Mr. Politician:

I mean by the above to impress upon you that I would not hesitate to do all within my power to send a Democrat to the Senate if he were the true sort, and if by so doing I could balk the efforts of you to send a Republican of the sort that has fostered the birthing and perpetuating of the greatest evil of the day—HIGH COST LIVING.

WORLD RECORDS GO IN 3 EVENTS

NEW YORK, May 27.—Louis Scott of Patterson, Abel Kiviat and James H. Duncan, are word record holders today, following their great performances at the Postoffice Clerk's Association games at Celtic Park.

Scott, running from scratch in the 5,000-meter race, won by 90 yards form a big field in 15m. 8 2-5s. The former world's time was 15m. 11 2-5s., made by Jean Bonin of France last year.

Kiviat of the Irish-American A. A. defeated Melvin W. Sheppard of the same club by 15 yards in the 1,500-meter run in 3m. 59 1-5s., and clipped three-fifths of a second off the world's record held by Harold Wilson of England, since 1908.

The third record was made by James H. Duncan of this city, who competing unattached, threw the discus from the 8 ft. 2½ in. Olympic circle, 156 ft. 1 in. This eclipses the throw by E. Nilsson, in the tryouts at the Stadium at Stockholm yesterday by 12 ft. 9 in.

Oscar Hedlund of the Boston A. A., was leading the other contestants in the 1500-meter race, but was taken with a stitch and retired after going about 700 yards.

T. Halpin, Boston A. A. (5 yards), was second in the 300-meter handicap.

Buchanans in Two Games on Thursday

The Buchanans will have their hands full Memorial Day when they line up against two of the strongest teams in the semi-professional class. In the morning their opponents will be the Arlington Town team at Neponset, while in the afternoon they will play East Bridgewater.

The Bucks and East Bridgewater were both members of the Trolley League last Summer, and the rivalry between these two is intense.

In the morning game Sullivan and Ramsey will be the battery for Arlington, while Fitzgerald and Kelley will be in the points for the Bucks. In the afternoon Benson and Kelley will do the heavy work for the visitors, while Leach and Perkins will be the East Bridgewater battery.

Germany's Olympic Stars in Poor Shape

LEIPSIC, May 27.—Germany's athletes showed up rather poorly in the first of the preliminaries to select representatives for the Olympic games.

The events were: Discus, shot-put, high jump, running broad jump, 100, 400, 1,500-meter and 10-kilometer runs.

The Olympic figures were not approached, except in the 100 meters, which Kern of Munich won in 11 1-10s. The high jump was won by Leische, with 5ft. 10¾in.; 400 meters, Burlowitz, 53s.; 10 kilometers, Vietz, 33m. 45 1-10s. This is a new German record.

The other perofrmances were mediocre. The shot-put measured only 37ft. 2¾ in., and the discus throw 122ft. 2 3-5in.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

Kennedy Favorite in Big Bout

◆ ◆ ◆

Ferguson Confident of Victory

By JACK CONWAY.

"BIG" Tom Kennedy is picked to defeat Sandy Ferguson in their ten-round bout at the Pilgrim A. A., tomorrow night. Kennedy has always followed the straight and narrow path, while Chelsea's stubborn child has seldom been accused of being a quiet, law-abiding citizen.

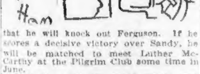
Kennedy is quite a curiosity, for besides being a fair heavyweight he is the son of a New York millionaire who passes away his time laying out new streets and building subways.

Kennedy is now twenty-six years of age and has been boxing for four years. He first attracted attention when he won the national amateur heavyweight title by defeating Emory Payne at Mechanics Building in 1908.

The New York "hope" is a big, powerful fellow. He is six feet two inches tall and tips the beam at 197 pounds. Tom is a very clever boxer and every bit as fast as Jim Corbett was in his prime.

Kennedy is a master of a tantalizing left jab, and his great speed enables him to score many effective left-hand punches. He isn't a wonderful puncher, and usually relies upon his skill in order to bring home the bacon.

Kennedy has still a whole lot to learn about the manly art. He is still "green," and would be easy picking for Johnson, Langford, McVey or Jeanette. He thinks that he will knock out Ferguson. If he scores a decisive victory over Sandy, he will be matched to meet Luther McCarthy at the Pilgrim Club some time in June.



Tom has got the speed mania and spends a great deal of his time in a buzz wagon. He took a long trip through the Western part of the State yesterday, but could not refrain from keeping his head out of the window of the machine and talking fight with the chauffeur.

KENNEDY'S father is opposed to his remaining in the ring. He is anxious for his son to enter bupsiness in New York. Tom, however, says that he would rather box than hold down the biggest job in the Empire State. He is well educated, and has received a degree at St. Francis Xavier College.

After he won the amateur heavyweight title he toured the country with Al Kaufman, and later with Jack Johnson. His first professional fight was against Al Palzer in New York, last July, and he was knocked out in nine rounds.

He later out-pointed Palzer in a ten-round bout. Tom has fought draws with Carl Morris and Jim Stewart, and has knocked out Marty Cutler and Flory Sullivan. He recently made a chopping block of Andy Morris of East Boston.

AL DELMONT and "Irish Paddy" Callahan should put up a rugged battle. Delmont is one of the best boys of his weight in the world and has claimed the bantamweight championship for several years.

Delmont has had a wealth of experience and is a very classy performer. He is as fast as lightning on his feet and a past master in the art of blocking, sidestepping and ducking.

Callahan, on the other hand, is a slugger. He relies upon his strength to win his ring battles. This is the biggest bout he has ever engaged in but he is confident of a win.

The other ten-round bout will be between Johnny Connolly of Scotland and Young Donahue of Roxbury. Donahue is not as good as he used to be but nevertheless is able to give a good account of himself.

Connolly was traveling at a merry clip until he met Packey McFarland at Fall River. Connolly and Donahue fought a spirited eight-round-draw several weeks ago at the Central A. C.

Roxbury fight "fans" are rooting for Donahue to win. I overheard a middle-aged man telling his wife and a ten-year-old girl, all about Donahue while waiting for a car at Roxbury Crossing, yesterday afternoon. Guess Phil must be some favorite in the Highland district.

WILLIE RITCHIE, the Californian lightweight, is now in New York and says that he would be able to vanquish Champion Ad Wolgast in a twenty-round bout. Ritchie has become real chesty since he held the Michigan "Wildcat" to a four-round draw.

George Memsic, Antonio LaGrave, One Round Hogan, Frankie Burns and Owen Moran also thought that they would be able to defeat Wolgast over the twenty-round route, but they discovered to their sorrow that Wolgast is one of the greatest long distance fighters of his weight that the game has ever produced.

Ritchie doubtless held Wolgast on even terms for four rounds, but the sturdy title holder has never been known to do anything remarkable in four-round bouts.

When he returned to the ring early in 1911, after an absence of five months he was outpointed in two short, no-decision bouts by Knockout Brown of New York.

Ad then signed for five twenty-round bouts and won each of them inside of the limit.

The champion is a very awkward fighter. He knows very little about the art of self-defence. He is as strong as a bull, however, and just chock-full of confidence and as game as they make them.

Ad's recent illness may have sapped some of his strength, but I won't believe that he has gone back until after he has engaged in a bout over his favorite route, which is twenty and not four rounds.

PACKEY McFARLAND'S next big bout is with Ray Bronson and it takes place at Indianapolis, Wednesday. McFarland and Bronson are both scientific boxers and the contest should be a fast one.

Bronson and McFarland fought a twenty-round draw at New Orleans in 1909, but Bronson has gone back during the past three years, while the Chicago favorite has improved 50 per cent.

Packey is one of the cleverest ringsters in the game. He is capable of outpointing any 135-pound boxer in the world in a ten or twelve-round bout. Packey is unable to make 133 pounds ringside and still be able to put up a rugged battle.

McGoorty and Moha In New York Bout

NEW YORK, May 27.—There are but two bouts of class scheduled for the Metropolitan boxing clubs this week. Many of the clubs are closing for the Summer season. Tomorrow night at the St. Nicholas A. C. Bob Moha of Milwaukee and Eddie McGoorty, two claimants to the middleweight championship, will do battle.

Moha and McGoorty rank as two of the most likely contenders in the much-tangled middleweight situation. McGoorty made his first appearance in this city last Winter and proved a sensation.

Moha is a strong, clever boxer and has fought his way from the bottom of the heap by sheer ability. Both men finished up their training today.

The other first-class bout is between Young Solsberg of Brooklyn, who was recently defeated on points by bantamweight champion Johnny Coulon, and Frankie Burns, of New Jersey.

This bout will take place on Wednesday night at the Royale A. C., in Brooklyn. Recently Burns has been fighting as a featherweight. His last battle was against Johnny Kilbane by whom he was defeated.

Harkins Ready to Meet Star Walkers

Cornelius J. Keyes, manager of Jack Harkins, the young pedestrian of Boston, is willing to match his man against any long distance walker in the country, to walk from fifty to one hundred miles anywhere and in any kind of weather.

In order to test his opponent thoroughly, Harkins will walk night and day until the distance is completed. As a proof of his good will, Manager Keyes is willing to post a forfeit of $50 just as soon as the challenge is accepted.

Young Harkins recently came over from Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, which is noted for its long-distance walkers. He has met several opponents in New York and defeated them all.

Harkins will wait six weeks to get an answer. After that he intends to make the walk across the continent from Boston to San Francisco in four months.

Football Work Under Way at Williams

WILLIAMSTOWN, May 27.—Football is under way at Williams, and a large squad of candidates was given a workout on the field as part of the regular Spring practise.

The only things attempted were kicking, passing and falling on the ball. Captain Michael expects to have formation practise under way by the end of this week.

HORINE COMING EAST.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 27.—George Horine, the champion high jumper, left for New York today to compete in the games at Celtic Park on June 3.

In addition to these athletic features, for the Summer, the Municipal Athletic Association will conduct swimming meets.

A baseball league of the Municipal Athletic Association will conduct games, beginning June 22.

Dick Adler May Quit Brookline Gymnasium

It was rumored around town today that Dick Adler intends to quit the Brookline Gym. Adler has coached the track team at the Brookline Gym for several years and has experienced remarkable success. He has been a big factor in developing such men as Oscar Hedlund and J. Oliver Johnstone.

It is hoped that the town officials of Brookline will do everything possible to keep Adler at the Brookline Gym. He has worked wonders with the material which he has had and has done more than his part to keep the "wealthy town" to the front in athletics.

PENN TO PLAY MICHIGAN.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 27.—Director Bartelme of the Michigan Athletic Association, has announced that a four-year football contract has been closed between the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Michigan. The 1912 and 1913 games are to be played in Philadelphia and the next two in Ann Arbor.

BRONSON DOWN TO WEIGHT

INDIANAPOLIS, May 27.—Ray Bronson has trained down to 138 pounds, the figure required by Packey McFarland of Chicago for their ten-round bout here next Wednesday night. The fight will be held at the Indianapolis Hall Park and indications point to the largest boxing attendance in the Middle West.

Everett High Sure of Title

◆ ◆ ◆

Fight for Suburban Honors

Everett High is now assured of the Suburban League championship. Cleo O'Donnell's charges defeattd Medford High, three times winners of the championship Saturday, giving Everett six victories, and that is enough.

The Suburban League is one of the strongest school leagues in New England, and each season produces some great teams. Medford put up a hard fight for the title, but could not beat the hard hitting squad from Everett.
from Everett.

Medford will be probably the runner up, and Malden and Somerville will fight for third position while Melrose is conceded the bottom berth.

This year's race was one of the most one-sided in the history of the league. The race started off with a brace of surprises, and it looked as if the race would be a tight one. Melrose, which was considered out of the race at the start, began by defeating Somerville and Malden, but the playing of this team and the pitching of Ross proved to be but a flash of the pan. Medford has a great team and Somerville is fairly strong, but the latter failed to hit, and this lost them a chance.

• • •

Some great schoolboy diamond battles are on the card for this week. On Thursday, Memorial Day, many rival teams will clash, and this should be one of the biggest days of the season. The Triangular League game between Newton High and Brookline High should attract a great crowd as this game is bound to be a bitter fight and the championship of the league lies in this game.

• • •

The schoolboy crews will get their final workouts this week for the big races to be held this week. The crews of the schoolboy Rowing Association, those working out from the Union Boat Club, will hold races on Wednesday, but the crews of the Boston Rowing Association, those working out from the B. A. A. house, will hold the races the week following.

• • •

The expected winners came across with the goods at the interscholastic games held at the Stadium on Saturday. The work of Oler of New York was a little more than expected. Oler set up a new world's interscholastic high jump mark, but the mark will not go down as a New England interscholastic record. Oler hails from New York, and J. Oliver Johnstone of Worcester Acaedmy is given credit of holding the record for the New England schools.

• • •

Three big meets of interest to the Boston schoolboys are on for this week, the Andover-Exeter dual on Memorial Day at Exeter, N. H., the Boston High School meet on Saturday afternoon at East Boston and the South Middlesex Agricultural Carnival at South Framingham.

JACK JOHNSON AT LAS VEGAS

EAST LAS VEGAS, N. M., May 27.—With four sparring partners to keep him busy, Heavyweight Champion Jack Johnson today began active training for his approaching championship fight with Jim Flynn. Johnson arrived last night from Chicago, where he has been doing preliminary work. His headquarters are at the Forsyth ranch, eight miles north of Las Vegas.

Johnson's sparring partners are Marty Cutler, John Perkins, Jack Delsray and Burns. Johnson's trainer, Tom Flanagan, will not arrive until the end of the week. Johnson looks fit, although a trifle heavy and is confident that he will win.

Tommy Ryan, Flynn's trainer, arrived almost simultaneously with Johnson and has mapped out a program for the Colorado scrapper, which will keep him hard at work until the eve of the battle on Fourth of July. Flynn says he will take off 25 pounds before the fight. He is already down to 220.

Johnson's coming opponent raised a protest when he saw he was being billed as the "Best of the Hopes."

"That does me an injustice, and, take it from me straight that I don't like it," stated the Pueblo fireman. "I was in the game and winning and making big money long before that white hope expression was coined. They pulled it for Carl Morris, Paalzer, Stewart and those sort of big boobs after Jeffries went down to defeat before Johnson, and the wise ones thought that some young phenom had to be discovered to bring the title back to where it belongs and where I am going to bring it July 4.

"These smart fellers overlooked me in the shuffle. I was at Reno the day Jeffries chucked it up, and I was loyal enough to drop $7,800 on him. I was only a little fellow, weighing around 165 pounds, but take it from me I could have whipped Jeff far worse than Johnson did. Don't call me a 'hope;' it makes me sore. Morris and those sort are 'hopes,' but not yours truly.

"I whipped Morris so soundly in New York last September that the Madison Square Garden Athletic Club and Charley White almost had their licenses taken away from them by the boxing commission of the State of New York for not stopping the bout.

"I was fairly killing Morris—in fact, the New York writers had it the next morning that he was the worst whipped heavyweight that ever left a ring and I guess you have noticed that Morris has never been any good since. I am 'hope?' Scratch that lingo. I cleaned Langford, Kaufman and those kind, besides Carl Morris."

Six Games in Four Days for Sox

◆ ◆ ◆

Hard Series With Senators Due

Six games in four days is the program for the Red Sox this week before they depart on their first western invasion. Today and tomorrow the World Champion Athletics will be the attraction, and then Stahl's men tackle the real trouble makers of the American league, the Washingtons.

The Senators arrive Wednesday and two games will be played while a second double-header is scheduled for the holiday, after which the Sox will take a long hike of more than a month.

The work of the team for the last week has greatly boosted its chances in the great race for the pennant which looked lost only a short week ago, and the fans are reckoning by games on just how many days it will take the Boston boys to step into first place.

The White Sox are having their own troubles with the Tigers. The Detroits celebrated the return of Ty Cobb to the game by handing out a thorough beating to the Chicagos.

Cleveland is also getting its bumps, the lowly St. Louis cellar champions taking the latest fall out of them.

Mob Giants in Game With Colored Team

PATERSON, N. J., May 27.—McGraw's New York Giants were given a big surprise when they came here and found that they were scheduled to play a team of colored players, called the Smart Sets, instead of the regular Paterson team.

After a long wrangle the New Yorks consented to play in order not to disappoint the big crowd of 8,000 people.

The game broke up in the tenth inning when the Giants left the field. They were hurried to a bus and were taken to their hotel, but not until they had been surrounded by a mob and were the targets for sticks and stones, which were so poorly timed that they did no damage to the New York players. The score was tied at 3 to 3 when the trouble occurred.

Murphy in Big Deal with Minor Leaguers

CHICAGO, May 27.—Rumor has it here that Eddie Lennox, the Cubs' third baseman, is to be returned to the Louisville Club, of the American Association.

The contemplated deal is said to be a three-cornered one, in which the Columbus American Association team will get a player in exchange for Jerry Downs, who is also said to be slated to go to the Louisville Club.

Infielder Jack Stansbury and Pitcher Charlie Snyder, of the Louisville Club, are expected to come to the Cubs. Harry McIntire has been sold to Kansas City.

STAR NAVY TWIRLER JOINS THE BAY VIEWS

Judd Logan, manager of the South Boston Bay Views, has unearthed another star pitcher in Paddy Hayes of the U. S. S. Virginia, the navy champion. Hayes pitched his first game for the South Boston team on Saturday against the Winthrop team and displayed great form. He allowed but four hits, fanned seven men and made three good hard singles himself. Logan has developed many good players and it is expected that Hayes will make the New England League when his enlistment expires.

ST. LOUIS IN NEW LEAGUE.

CLEVELAND, O., May 27.—St. Louis will get the Cleveland franchise in the United States League. Marshall Henderson, of Pittsburg, is on his way there to complete the details of the deal. It is understood that Otto Steifel, a wealthy brewer, has decided to get into the baseball business, and has made an offer for the franchise.

WAIVERS ASKED ON BROWN.

CHICAGO, May 27.—There is a persistent rumor here that Manager Chance has placed Mordecai Brown on the market. Brown, one of baseball's greatest pitchers, has lost his effectiveness and is now on the toboggan slide, it is thought.

EXETER CAPTAIN OUT OF GAME FOR MONTH

EXETER, N. H., May 27.—Roland V. Vaughn, the Haverhill boy who was injured while sliding to third base in the game with Haverhill High, will probably be confined to crutches for a month. The loss to Exeter, from an athletic standpoint, is sevre, as Vaughn is captain of the nine and leads his team in batting average.

ELBERFELD LOSES.

CINCINNATI, May 27.—Norman Elberfeld has been ordered to report to the Milwaukee Club of the American Association by the National Commission. He had appealed to the commission that he had been unfairly treated by the Washington American League Club, which released him to Milwaukee, but the commission upheld the Washington Club.

DELHI GOES TO COAST.

CHICAGO, May 27.—"Flame" Delhi, who pitched well for Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League last year, and was purchased by the Chicago Americans during the Winter, has been released to San Francisco. Delhi showed good form while with Chicago, but the old pitchers have been working so well that it was impossible to find a place for him.

BIG SHAKE-UP IN CUBS.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Another shake-up in an effort to find a suitable first baseman for the Chicago Nationals was announced today. Vic Saier will return to first, Hofman will go to centre field, and Ward Miller will be benched.

SHEAN TO JOIN GRAYS.

PROVIDENCE, May 27.—Dave Shean, the Arlington boy, who quit the Boston Nationals, has been signed by Manager Lake to play on the Providence team. Shean will report tomorrow and take Captain Atz's place at second in the Baltimore-Providence game here.

HOHENHORST RELEASED.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 27.—First Baseman Ed Hohenhorst of the local American League Club has been released to the Toledo club of the American Association.

Rules for Harmless Smoking

Draw in the smoke slowly, but blow it out quickly. Retain it in the mouth as short a time as possible.

Smoke slowly. Quick puffing makes hot burning. The higher the temperature of the smoke, the more nicotine there is deposited in the mouth.

Use a cigar holder—a long one is best as it tends to cool the smoke.

Avoid heavy, black cigars. Use a cigar made with fine Havana filler and Sumatra wrapper. This is the hygienic cigar and the best of this type is, we believe, the

Pilgrims Come Home This Week

Tail End Rivals in Hot Battles

While the Red Sox are preparing for their western trip, Kling and his Pilgrim band are slowly making their way homeward but not until two more games have been played against Philadelphia, and then comes the real fight for last place honors with Brooklyn.

Friday is an off day here, but Saturday the Cubs open up for a three-game series at the South End grounds and while the Chance team has it on the Pilgrims by a wide margin, on paper, some surprises are in store for the Windy City chaps.

Kling has had a hard run on his last trip but he intends to get a new start and says he will commence on the Cubs. The pitching department has been the one weak feature of the game so far, Hess, Perdue and Dickson being the only ones to show their worth.

THE WOMAN WITH "NERVES"—THE CAUSE AND THE REMEDY

The Two Small Pictures Show Two Movements in the Exercises Described by Miss Kellermann

MISS ANNETTE KELLERMANN

ONE of the main reasons why women do not attain the full perfection of beauty which nature intended them to have is because they constantly encourage the destructive element which we call "nerves" for short.

The woman with "nerves" is never quite healthy or beautiful, because of the constant drain on her forces.

The woman with a certain kind of nerves simply starves her hair right off her scalp, because she keeps those scalp and head and neck muscles so tight that not enough blood can get up there to nourish the hair. Then she goes to a scalp specialist and gets massage treatment, which helps some, but the real trouble lies in herself.

Another woman finds that she sets her jaw and frowns all the time quite unconsciously. Her nerves have gone to her face. Another woman holds her shoulders rigid, the next one never takes a good long breath the third gulps her food down. Another girl [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] chest. If you ask them why they do these things, why they are so tense, they cut off the blood supply in some part of the body by contracting the muscles—the answer always is: "Oh, I'm so nervous I can't help it."

The person who is nervous and tense is almost always awkward and if for that reason alone "nerves" should be put a stop to. You notice I did not say controlled, because this physical tension, which is the result of nervousness, can not be controlled in the ordinary way. The more you control it, the worse it gets and girls, particularly children who are forced to "control" this kind of nervousness, often become quite ill as the result of the wrong method of changing the condition.

You can overcome "nerves" and muscular tension by relaxation, and by relaxation only.

To find out what relaxation really is you must contract your already stiff muscles even further and then let go. The first delicious feeling of relief is just the beginning of what real relaxation is going to mean to the nervous woman.

A Good Example

When you watch a cat wake up, stretch itself, stiffen every muscle in its body and then relax completely, you have a perfect example of how the relaxation exercises ought to be done to overcome nervousness.

I'm going to begin with the girl who has a nervous, tense face, with lines of worry and anxiety and a set frown between the eyes.

I want her to take advantage of every opportunity to do this relaxing work. She can practice in street cars, and wherever she has an odd moment.

Sit in a comfortable chair and rest the head against the back. Close the eyes. Relax the jaws and let the mouth open naturally. Put your mind on the muscles of your own self.

Try and feel yourself relaxing and letting go up there. You can do it better by first tensing all those muscles over which you have control and then letting go of them. Contract the forehead muscles and then relax them. Do this repeatedly. Each time you will be able to relax a little more. Now take the cheeks and jaw muscles. Work over every set of muscles, contracting them vigorously and relaxing. In a little while your face will begin to tingle, a sure sign that the flow of blood is increasing in those tense set muscles. After some practice you will lose your nervous expression naturally, for tension yields to relaxation, but not to rigid control, which simply increases the nervousness.

EXERCISE FOR NERVOUS INDIGESTION

People afflicted with this trouble should eat very slowly, masticating carefully and long. They should avoid teas, coffees and highly-spiced, rich or heavy dishes, and get out in the open air just as much as possible. Here are two exercises which will help if done night and morning.

Stand erect, place the left hand on the left side of the body just above the waist. Inhale and stretch all the muscles of the left side upward, lifting ribs and shoulder to the highest degree possible. The abdominal muscle will contract. Hold this position for several moments, then relax completely and exhale.

Another good exercise for nervous indigestion and for nerves generally consists in a vigorous contraction of the muscles of the back while lifting up the ribs. Take a big breath and lift up the chest. Feel the contraction in the back. Hold the position as long as you comfortably can. Now relax completely. Repeat until you begin to yawn.

Where the shoulders have been held too rigidly exercises with the staff, holding body and arms very tense, makes these muscles so tired that one instinctively relaxes them after the exercise is done.

Hold the body straight and rigid, grasp a staff in both hands, inhale and raise staff above the head back of the shoulders up again and down to the chest, exhale, relax and lower the staff.

A Fine Exercise

One of the finest exercises for tensing and relaxing all the muscles of the body is spear or stick throwing. Get a small spear; a stick with a sharp point will do. Aim at a target and take a few running steps before throwing the spear, which should be held shoulder high. While you are throwing the spear every part of body is vitalized and tense. As soon as the spear or rod leaves the hand the muscles relax. This relaxation practiced steadily is the cure for "nerves." It is more a mental than a physical process and no one can relax physically without an effort of the will.

Getting On In Life

NO.7—THE MOVING PICTURE SHOW

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

THE novels of Charles Dickens may be called, in one sense, the original moving picture idea. Dickens has the faculty of throwing his pictures on the screen of the reader's mind so sharply that he needs no other machine to see and enjoy them.

Of course, the faculty that Dickens had which enabled him to do this as a writer, [illegible] from his [illegible] looking at the world about him, of looking at it hard; of seeing it clearly and then of making a man in New Zealand, or India, or Labrador see it by means of a printed page.

Any one who wants to get on in life should cultivate this habit of looking at the great show that goes on about us forever and ever; of looking at it hard, seeing it clearly, and then getting from it all its particular meaning. It is a great habit, and a great help, for it teaches us to draw conclusions from what we see. But we should see much and draw few conclusions until we are sure of drawing approximately the right ones.

It is impossible to overestimate the value of the life about us as a means of education. We look [illegible] at our feet too much, and not enough about us and above us.

The telescope man in the park will never get rich, even though he is doing business in a city of many thousands of people. Why? Because few of us know what a privilege it is to look up above our heads and see what is there.

For a ten-cent piece you can see the rings of Saturn and its moons, or the craters and mountains of the moon. It is true that Saturn itself looks about as big as a pea, and its eight moons like pinheads. But it is a wonderful sight, nevertheless; one never to be forgotten; one that will brace up the mind in many an odd moment of foolishness or sorrow.

Anyone who is out after moving pictures should not miss this one. You would be surprised to know what can be seen in the heavens, even with an opera glass. The moon, through an opera glass, is such a glorious sight that you will never again think of it as a cause of good luck or bad luck, according as you happen to see it.

II.

The fact is, we do not see what is near us. A student of Professor Agassiz of Harvard tells us that when he went to Cambridge to study with that great scientist, his first task was to look at a dead fish and report what he saw.

Professor Agassiz left him and came back in an hour. The young man handled the dead fish as anyone would who thinks he sees everything in about one minute. He reported and was informed that he had not even made a beginning.

Agassiz gave him two hours for the next report. The fish was becoming more and more hateful to the young man. Suddenly, however, he thought he would begin and draw it on paper. Then, he said, he really began to see it. Agassiz came back after a while, and this time encouraged him a little. "But you have missed the most important thing. Look again."

And so it went on hour after hour, day after day, until finally the young man actually began to see what he was looking at. He afterward said that one lesson made a man and an observer of him.

It convinced him that HE COULD NOT SEE THE THINGS BEFORE HIS OWN EYES. Agassiz taught him that fact, and convinced him of it.

Few people have the ability to state things exactly as they are. They do not see them as they are, and, naturally, any report they make must be wrong, or partly wrong, which is just as bad.

Anyone who can look and see what he looks at, and tell the facts and nothing but the facts to someone else, has learned the one great lesson of getting on.

So the moving picture show of life about us is a great opportunity for training the mind and getting it on a business basis for facts and exactness.

Dead Shots in the Night ❧ By Garrett P. Serviss

A LITTLE INVENTION OF THRILLING INTEREST TO BURGLARS AND WILD BEASTS

IN my youthful days when a farmer stole out on his front porch in his stockings, at dead of night, with his brown barrelled fowling piece, made over from a Revolutionary musket, to shoot a serenading cat, he got his wife to stand behind him with a candle held over his head to illuminate the gun sights. The cat usually stopped long enough considering the strange spectacle to get the full benefit of the shot.

This primitive method of sighting a gun at night forms the groundwork of an interesting little invention, whose possibilities are illustrated in the accompanying pictures. There is a good deal more of philosophy in this matter than may appear on the surface. The old farmer had the fundamental idea without having the scientific knowledge or the mechanical ingenuity required to develop it.

The Tiger Turns Into a Great Big, Blinking Cat

Hands Up!

His Majesty, the Lion, Gets Both Puzzled and Angry

Interesting Facts

You will observe that with his little searchlight, attached to the underside of his rifle, the sportsman in the picture accomplishes two things at once. In the first place he illuminates the living target and insures its remaining motionless for a few seconds through the fascinating effect of the light; and, in the second place, he gets his aim simultaneously with the revolution of its object, because the line of projected light is so arranged, parallel with the barrel of the gun, that the bullet is sure to strike within half an inch of the centre of the small illuminated area on the target. In the meanwhile the shooter is concealed, in relative darkness, behind the dazzle of the flash-light.

This is practically what the farmer and his wife accomplished with their candle, for its light revealed the object and directed the aim, while temporarily paralyzing the animal with surprise and curiosity. But, of course, the modern invention is incomparably more effective.

Attached to a revolver this device would probably be as its inventor claims, a surprise for burglars. The sudden illumination alone would be, in most cases, sufficient, and no actual shooting would be necessary. It would be the burglar who would have to throw up his hands, or if he wasn't quick about it the bullet would follow the light ray.

A Picturesque Sight

But the most picturesque applications of searchlight shooting must be sought in the hunting field. All who have been in the Adirondacks and the Maine woods know the astonishing effects produced upon deer, and other animals, by a light carried in the bow of a silently paddled boat, where the hunter, with gun ready poised, sits in the contrasted darkness behind the light and takes his aim at leisure. A narrow beam of light, projected in the line of fire, would better define the mark and, at the same time, insure a more deadly aim.

Some of the most thrilling stories told by African and Indian hunters for lions and tigers relate to night adventures in the jungles, where the shooter conceals himself on a leafy platform constructed at an elevation above some haunt of wild beasts, where a lure has been placed to attract the night-prowling quarry.

Uncertainty Avoided

Usually it is necessary to take aim by the uncertain light of the moon, or the dim illumination from the stars. But with a search or flash light sending its ray straight along the track to be followed by the bullet, all uncertainty of aim would be avoided, with the added advantage of a sharper definition of the target, and a momentary paralysis of the quarry. In many cases, a wild beast thus surprised by a dazzling light would, instead of turning to flee, simply gaze in stupid astonishment at the blinding point of light, which would be all that it could see.

The case is not without analogy to that of a warship suddenly illuminating an enemy with a beam of light, and concentrating its fire along the path of the rays. The invention of the electric light and of means of controlling its direction have already revolutionized many of the manoeuvres of war, and it is evident that they are going to play their part in rendering war impossible in the future.

❧ ❧ The Manicure Lady ❧ ❧

"THIS is the most backward Spring that I have ever saw, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Honest to goodness, it has rained so much lately that there ain't any umbrellas left to swipe. I had to go three blocks from the car to this tonsorial palace this morning, without any covering for my defenceless head except my lid, and I took every foot of it on the run. I wouldn't have minded the exertion, George, only one of those fresh guys that is always standing around the corners saw me doing the ten flat sprint, and he said something like 'Here comes Maud S.,' or at least it sounded a lot like that."

"Don't pay no attention to fellows that is standing around on street corners," advised the Head Barber. You ought to know better. If they was worth listening to, they wouldn't be there to talk. Most of them is a lot of short card guys. Don't notice them—that's the best way."

"That's what Brother Wilfred is all the time telling me," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred says that a man which will stand on a corner and pass remarks ain't got the first principles of a gent to begin with. One reason that the poor kid is sore at them loafers is because he picked a quarrel with one of them one night when he was escorting a young chicken home from the show, and, although he didn't say much when he got home, I gathered from his map that he got mussed up awful. One of his ears has never been the same old ear since. But Wilfred is like a Indian, he never forgets. Now he always goes around the block to dodge that corner and I guess that is why he is all the time cautioning me to pay no attention to guys that makes fresh remarks.

"But, getting back to the weather, George, I swear to goodness I have never saw anything quite like it. Sister Mayme was out shopping and she came home looking like an old hen that fell in a pond. Mother went over to call on one of the neighbors and tell all the gossip, and when she got home she looked wetter than Sister Mayme. And the old gent came home soaked, too.

"Sometimes I wonder if the Springs now is like the Springs we used to have when we was kids. I can close my eyes now, George, and think of one of them old Spring days back in Colfax, Wisconsin, when the first buttercups and daisies was peeking through the green sod, and the May flowers was blooming in the shady woods, and the anemones was blossoming on the sunny hills, waiting for us kids to pick them. I can hear the calls of black birds in the poplar trees, and over in the swamps there was little cat birds singing in the alders. Don't it make you think of the old days, George?"

"It sure does," agreed the Head Barber, pausing for a moment and letting his half honed razor fall to the shelf. "It sure does. And do you remember them cowslips that used to grow along the edge of the frog pond, with their green leaves and their yellow petals? They was the yellowest things I ever seen, kiddo. And the pussy willows—I remember how I grabbed a bunch of them and took them to my teacher. She patted me on the head and called me a dear little lad, I remember. And I remember how three of the boys in my class got after me at recess and cleaned me good and proper for being the teacher's pet. It took three of them to do it, though."

"It must have, George," said the Manicure Lady. "But them was the Spring days, wasn't they? There ain't no Spring in a big city, George. I often wish I could go back to the little town."

"Even if you did, kiddo," sighed the Head Barber, "it wouldn't be the same. Spring is for folks different than us. Spring is for kids that play leap frog and pick flowers. Spring ain't for us no more. Right next, sir—this way."

Cured Baby's Awful Skin Trouble for 50c

With Resinol. Never Saw Anybody in Such a Fix.

"My baby was about three days old when he began to blister all over, from his navel down to his knees, and on his back. Yellow water would run out, and finally the skin just slipped off of him just like he was burned. It seemed to worry him awfully. The bloody water oozed out. I never saw anybody in such a fix and everybody said the same. I tried everything I could think of, but nothing seemed to do him any good. I worried on with him in that fix until he was about three months old. Finally a friend told me about Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and to send to you for a sample. By the time I used up the sample I could see he was getting better, so I sent for a 50c jar of Resinol Ointment and by the time I used up that he was well. I never can recommend the Resinol remedies too highly. They are worth their weight in gold. If anyone wants to know about the Resinol remedies I can certainly tell them and will do it with pleasure."—Mrs. Mary E. Kidd, Figsboro, Va., April 8, 1912.

Do you know, as this mother did, the anguish of seeing your little one tormented by some terrible skin affliction, which, in spite of every effort, you are powerless to relieve? Then why not do as she did? Send for samples of Resinol Soap and Ointment, use them, and see how itching instantly stops, the little sufferer rests, and healing begins. Your druggist sells Resinol Soap (25c) and Resinol Ointment (50c and $1), and recommends them for skin and scalp eruptions of young and old, and also for pimples, blackheads, dandruff, sores, boils, burns, wounds and piles. PART I.

"Last Seen at Victoria!"

ALICE, Lady Dyke, puckered her handsome forehead into a thoughtful frown as she drew aside the window curtains of her boudoir and tried to look out into the opaque blackness of a November fog in London.

Behind her was cheerfulness—in front uncertainty. Electric lights, a nice fire reflected from gleaming brass, the luxury of carpets and upholstery, formed an alluring contrast to the dull yellow glare of a solitary lamp in the outer obscurity.

But Lady Dyke was a strong minded woman. There was no trace of doubt in the wrinkled brows and reflective eyes. She held back the curtains with her left hand, buttoning a glove at the wrist with the other. Fog or no fog, she would venture forth, and she was already dressed for the weather in tailor-made costume and Winter toque.

She was annoyed, but not disconcerted by the fog. Too long had she allowed herself to take things easily. The future was as murky as the atmosphere; the past was dramatically typified by the pleasant surroundings on which she resolutely turned her back. Lady Dyke was determined as to her actions, and a dull November night was a most unlikely agent to restrain her from following the course she had mapped out.

Moving to the light again, she took from her pocket a long, closely written letter. Its details were familiar to her, but her face hardened as she hastily ran through it in order to find a particular passage.

At last she gained her object—to make quite sure of an address. Then she replaced the document, stood undecided for a moment, and touched an electric bell.

"James," she said, to the answering footman, "I am going out."

"Yes, milady."

"Sir Charles is not at home?"

"No, milady."

"I am going to Richmond—to see Mrs. Talbot. I shall probably not return in time for dinner. Tell Sir Charles not to wait for me."

"Shall I order the carriage for your ladyship?"

"Will you listen to me and remember what I have said?"

"Yes, milady."

James ran downstairs, opened the door, bowed as Lady Dyke passed into Portman square, and then confidentially informed Buttons that "the missus" was in a "rare old wax" about something.

"She nearly jumped down me blooming throat when I asked her if she would have the carriage," he said.

Her ladyship's mood did not soften when she drifted from the fixed tenure of Wensley House, Portman square, into the chaos of Oxford street and fog at 5:30 on a November evening.

WHO'S WHO IN "A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE"

From left to right the characters are: Charles Winninger, as Inspector White of Scotland Yard; William P. Carleton, as Claude Bruce, the hero of the story; Blanche Ring, as "Mrs. Gwendoline Hillmer," the Woman of Mystery; Alexander Clarke, as Sir Charles Dyke and Florence Shirley, as Jane Harding, the scheming ladies' maid.

Though not a true "London particular," the fog was chilly, exasperating, tedious. People bumped against each other without apology. 'buses crunched through the traffic with deadly precision, pair-horse vans swept around corners with magnificent carelessness.

A Rapid Drive

In the result Lady Dyke, who meant to walk, as she was somewhat in advance of the time she had fixed on for this very important engagement, took a hansom. In her present mood slight things annoyed her. Usually, the London cab horse is a thoughtful animal; he refuses to hurry; when he falls he lies contented, secure in the knowledge that for five blissful minutes he will be at complete rest. But this misguided quadruped flew as though oats and meadow grass awaited him at Victoria Station on the Underground Railway.

He raced down Park Lane, skidded past Hyde Park Corner and grated the off-wheel of the hansom against the curb outside the station within eight minutes.

As she stepped from the vehicle and halted beneath a lamp to take a florin from her purse, a tall, ulster-wrapped gentleman, walking rapidly into Victoria street, caught a glimpse of her face and well-proportioned form.

Instantly his hat was off.

"This is an unexpected pleasure, Lady Dyke. Can I be of any service?"

"Oh, Mr. Bruce, is it you? I am going to see my sister at Richmond. Isn't the weather horrid? I shall be so glad if you will put me into the right train."

Mr. Claude Bruce, barrister and man about town, whose clean-cut features and dark, deep-set eyes made him as readily recognizable, knew that she would have been much better pleased had he passed without greeting. Like the footman, he wondered why she did not drive to her carriage rather than travel by the underground railway on such a night. He guessed that she was perturbed—that her voluble explanation was a disguise.

He reflected that he could ill afford any delay in dressing for a distant dinner—that good manners oft entail inconvenience—but of course he said:

"Delighted. Have you any wraps?"

"No, I am just going for a chat, and shall be home early."

He bought her a first-class ticket, noting as an odd coincidence that it bore the number of the year, 1903, descended to the barrier, found that the next train for Richmond passed through in ten minutes, explained his presence to the ticket-collector, and paced the platform with his companion.

Having condemned the fog, and the last play, and the latest book, they were momentarily silent.

Thought the woman: "He is a man of the world, and an experienced lawyer. Shall I tell him?"

Thought the man: "She wants to take me into her confidence, and I am too busy to be worried by some small family squabble."

Said she: "Are you much occupied at the courts just now, Mr. Bruce?"

"No," he replied; "not exactly. My practice is more consultive than active. Many people seek my advice about matters of little interest, never thinking that they would best serve their ends by acting decisively and promptly themselves."

Lady Dyke set her lips. She could be both prompt and decisive. She resolved to keep her troubles, whatever they were, locked in the secrecy of her own heart, and when she next spoke of some trivial topic the barrister knew that he had been spared a recital.

He regretted it afterwards.

At any other moment in his full and useful life he would have encouraged her rather than the reverse. Even now, a few seconds too late, he was sorry. He strove to bring her back to the verge of explanations, but failed, for her ladyship was a proud, self-reliant personage—one who would never dream of risking a rebuff.

A train came, with "Richmond" staring at them from the smoke and steam of the engine.

"Good-bye!" he said.

"Good-bye!"

"Shall I see you again soon"

"I fear not. It is probable that I shall leave for the South of France quite early."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

THE TYPHOON!!

By J. W. M'CONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

TOKORAMO was busily writing as he spoke and after a few minutes of silence he suddenly threw himself back in the chair and tossed the brush on the floor, bursting into a ghastly laugh. Lindener sprang up, startled.

"It is finished, It is finished!" cried Tokoramo, in an unnaturally loud and discordant voice. "All—all that I can do for Japan is finished!" And again he laughed his terrifying laugh.

Lindener crept toward him and leaned across the desk, looking into the upturned face. There was a queer, smouldering fire in his eyes.

"That's good, my friend, that's good!" he exclaimed in a strained voice. "Now that you are through with your work it will not disturb you to listen. Do you know I have wondered and pondered how this boy, fresh from his country, from his people—why should he give up the freedom of his youth, the happiness of his life—for her? I've wondered how she could sink so tragically into his life in one little, narrow day's acquaintance."

Tokoramo stared at him with dull eyes.

"It was horrible," he said, faintly. His face was gray beneath the brown skin, the lips were blue and his breath came in quivering, uncertain sighs. Lindener leaned farther over.

"Yes, it was horrible, wasn't it? Why should he have done it?" You know! Tell me!" he pleaded, suddenly.

He pointed his finger accusingly and wet his dry lips. Tokoramo could not speak a word, but his eyes told everything.

"You pitied me—you gave me your hand, your sketches, your—your cognac, your friendship—but you loved her! And you killed her!"

As if the words had been a blow with an axe, Tokoramo sank into a heap in the chair, his head bowed on his breast.

"I knew it!" cried Lindener, in a bitter triumph. "I've dragged your secret from you! I knew I would do it if I could only keep close enough to you! And now, my friend!" he cried, his eyes shining wildly, as they fell on the manuscript. "Now, my friend, you shall expiate your crime!"

He seized the mass of manuscript and sprang around to the match-box.

"You killed her because she came between you and your people! Well, you and your people shall expiate the crime. We will offer up a sacrifice—your work!" He struck a match and Tokoramo tried in vain to rise or cry out. But Lindener's voice carried far and there was a quick rush of steps in the ante-room.

"Your work—your brain—and all Japan shall sacrifice with you!"

And he held the match to the corner of the paper. As the flames leaped up Yamoshi's hand seized the manuscript and the voice of Joshakawa thundered:

"What does this mean? Tokoramo's work! You are burning it!"

Yamoshi had crushed out the flame and announced with relief that there was no damage. The margin—and not the text itself—was [illegible] burst again. Lindener quickly regained his self-command after the shock of the interruption.

And with a shake of his head and another bitter laugh he strode out. Joshakawa turned to Tokoramo. Dr. Omayi was bending over him, his restless fingers working under the folds of the kimono.

"You have finished your work, Tokoramo," said the old man, with a kindly thrill in his voice. "His Excellency will be overjoyed!"

Dr. Omayi raised his head, straightened up and thrust his hands into his pockets.

"Tokoramo is dead!" he said quietly.

Ten, fifteen seconds passed in the deepest silence.

The soft gray light of the coming day flowed in through the great windows at the east and touched the bowed heads. A bird in the garden called sleepily to its mate. Joshakawa raised his hand.

"Death—death is nothing!" he said, quietly. "Life—life and duty! Kobohashi, you will find the records in the safe. Yamoshi, make an inventory of the papers in the desk. Doctor, notify the coroner."

PETERMAN'S DID IT

DUTY TO GUIDE EX-GOV. GUILD

Former Governor Curtis Guild, Ambassador to St. Petersburg, whose friends have picked him as the man to succeed United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane when the latter's term expires next Spring, gave out his first statement today on the senatorial situation.

His statement was taken to indicate that he is to be a candidate and is awaiting conferences with his political friends before making an announcement of the fact.

Ambassador Guild, who returned to Boston Saturday night, declared in an interview with an AMERICAN reporter today that he intends to consider the senatorial situation thoroughly within the next two or three days. He says his ultimate decision depends upon his answer to the question as to where his duty lies in the matter.

To Confer With Friends

The ambassador was seen in his old office at the Commercial Bulletin, to which his brother, Courtenay Guild, succeeded when the former Governor went to the Czar's court. On his desk were a hundred or more telegrams from friends all over the State, asking him whether he would run for the United States Senate. Since his return to America the ambassador's friends have been declaring that like Barkis, in David Copperfield, "Curt was willin.'"

"I've been in Boston only a little over twenty-four hours," Ambassador Guild said to an AMERICAN reporter today. "I have not had an opportunity to see any of my friends nor to think seriously over the political situation.

"I shall talk with several of my political friends between now and Wednesday. When I know the exact situation I shall make a public announcement as to whether I shall make a campaign for the Senatorship or not.

"I have received a large number of messages this morning asking me if I was going to run. I have not and will not have an opportunity to reply to any one of these till I have held these consultations with my political friends."

"Is it likely you will run?" the ambassador was asked.

"I will not say that there is a possibility that I shall run for the office," Mr. Guild replied. "What I wish to make plain is that I will consider the matter thoroughly. Under the circumstances there is another feature that I must consider well, that is where my duty lies. When I decide that I will be ready to announce my final decision.

"The diplomatic office I now hold places me in a position where I can serve the United States without political influence on either side. There is a great satisfaction in knowng that one has done one's best for the whole of his country.

"On the other hand, the senatorship means that a man should do his full duty for his State, and of course in a measure for the United States. But a man holding a senatorship is subjected to a considerable amount of political partisan influence. This is something which I shall consider well before making my decision.

"The announcement that Senator Crane was going to retire struck me like a blow between the eyes with a baseball bat. I had always considered that Senator Crane would hold the office for life and I was certainly greatly surprised to learn that he will retire after the expiration of his present term.

Home on Personal Matters.

"I do not know what his reasons were for retiring. No one had intimated to me in anyway that Senator Crane would retire. I came back to the United States and especially to Boston for purely personal reasons and in no way was I influenced in making the trip by politics.

"For instance I have this morning demonstrated that I am a good progressive by appearing before a notary to sign as an officer the annual report of a corporation. This report is required by an act of the Legislature which I helped to put through when I was Governor.

"The law requires that the officer appear before a notary in this State when he signs the report. Besides this, there are several other personal matters in Boston which required my attention.

"I shall attend to all of these and then hold political conferences with friends. Then I shall return to Washington, probably some time Wednesday afternoon.

To See the President.

"I shall make a formal call upon President Taft as soon as I reach that city. I do not think this will require more than fifteen minutes. It will relate solely to affairs with Russia. I shall in no way discuss the senatorial situation with the President. Even if I wished to do so, I could not discuss national politics with you, for the reason that I am an officer in the diplomatic service, and one of the regulations forbids this very thing."

Ambassador Guild laughed as he concluded with this statement:

"It did not take me twenty-four hours to see that the political situation surrounding the senatorship is indeed a most peculiar one. Some of my friends have been very active in suggesting my name for this office and for this reason I feel called upon to make a public announcement as soon as I have reached my decision."

ROBERT BACON HERE TO ATTEND HARVARD FELLOWS' MEETING

Robert Bacon, former Ambassador to France, who resigned to become a member of the Harvard corporation, came to Boston today and attended his first meeting of that body since his election. The meeting was held as usual in the offices at No. 50 State street, and President Lowell presided. The business transacted was of a routine nature. It is expected Mr. Bacon will spend the Summer with his family on the North Shore and move into Boston in the Fall.

The position as a member of the President and Fellows of Harvard, the formal title of the corporation, is the highest honor a Harvard man may receive from his university. The members of the corporation administer the $25,000,000 worth of property owned by the university, and are a self-perpetuating body. The present members of the corporation are President Lowell, Dr. Henry P. Walcott, Major Henry Lee Higginson, Dr. Arthur T. Cabot, Thomas Nelson Perkins and Mr. Bacon.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 27.—The body of another Titanic victim, James McGrady of Belfast, Ireland, a fireman, has been recovered by the steamer Algerine, under charter by the White Star line, according to wireless news. The Algerine has set out on a ten days' cruise to further comb the seas for more bodies.

PARIS, May 27.—The Compagnie Generale Transaerienne announces its decision to establish a service of hydroaeroplanes between Calais and Dover to enable passengers to cross the Channel in about fifteen minutes. TAFT'S MESSAGE TO GOMEZ

President Taft.

I am sincerely gratified to learn of your government's energetic measures to put down the disturbances, and to know you are confident of being successful.

As was fully explained to the Cuban charge d'affaires here, this government's motive in sending ships to Key West, just as in sending the Prairie to the Guantaname naval station, was merely to be able to act promptly in case it should unfortunately become necessary to protect American life and property by rendering moral support or assistance to the Cuban government.

As was made quite clear at the time, these ordinary measures of precaution were entirely disassociated from any question of intervention.

TAFT OUTLINES CUBAN PLAN

land 800 bluejackets without crippling her crew.

Commanding officers of every battalion of marines in the United States are under orders from the Navy Department to be prepared to start for Cuba at a moment's notice.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S MESSAGE CAUSES RELIEF AT HAVANA

HAVANA, May 27.—The message from President Taft declaring that the movement of American troops was "entirely disassociated from any question of intervention," caused a feeling of relief in government circles today. President Gomez's advisers asserted that it would greatly help him in crushing the revolt because it showed that he had the moral support of the United States.

President Gomez, in the effort to crush out the negro uprising and thus avert intervention by the United States, has called into action all the military resources of the government.

Five thousand troops are in the field under orders to give decisive battle to the rebellious negroes at the earliest possible moment.

The rebels will be treated with the greatest severity. Prisoners of war will be shot as traitors.

Warships Rushing to Cuban Waters.

Three thousand men in Oriente Province, under command of General Monteaugo, federal commander-in-chief, are in motion against the principal rebel detachments under General Estenoz and Ivonet. The government army hopes to force the horde of rebels into a battle within forty-eight hours.

Continued depredations and outrages are reported.

The rebels are strongest in Santiago and Oriente provinces. In those provinces plantation owners are marshalling their employes and arming them. The government is supplying arms and ammunition for private citizens free of charge.

From Holguin, in Santiago province, it is reported that negroes attacked the village of Sao Arriba, burning a number of houses and carrying off a number of women.

Armed with Machetes.

Many of the negroes went into the field armed only with machetes. These have proved poor weapons in brushes against rurales, who are armed with carbines and revolvers.

Traffic in the main line of the Cuba railroad between Havana and its easterly terminus at Santiago is interrupted at half a dozen different places, where the negroes have burned bridges or blown up the tracks to prevent the advance of troop trains into Santiago province.

The extreme northeastern port of Baracoa is being closely watched to guard against the landing of filibusters. The government has learned that Haytian and Dominican blacks and much ammunition have been landed within the last four days.

A case is reported from Santiago province, where a negro planter led half a dozen other negroes against the plantation where he had formerly worked. The overseer advanced to meet the negroes, all of whom were armed. Not realizing their hostile intent he held out his hand in greeting, when the leader drew a revolver and shot him through the heart. This is but one of many incidents of private revenge worked out under the shadow of the uprising.

MRS. HILL WILL WED JUDGE PRIEST "SOMETIME IN JUNE"

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind., May 27.—Mrs. Mabel Currie Hill, divorced wife of Ebenezer Hill, Jr., of Norwalk and Judge Henry Samuel Priest of St. Louis, have announced their engagement and add that the wedding will take place "sometime in June."

Judge Priest, who is fifty-nine and Mrs. Hill who is twenty-nine, have been together whenever possible since their arrival here. They put in the mornings at golf and the afternoon at target practice with rifles, of both which sports Mrs. Hill is very fond.

RECEPTION TONIGHT TO FATHER M'MAHON

The celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Dr. John W. McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Charlestown, since May, 1881, will end tonight with a general reception in Roughan Hall. Today Dr. McMahon will be the guest at a children's reception in Roughan Hall.

MRS. ROBERTS RECITES STORY

Mrs. Blanche M. Roberts resumed her testimony before Judge Pierce in the Suffolk Divorce Court today. She told the court that she went down stairs after she had supposedly retired for the night, and discovered her husband with his stenographer in his arms.

"I just turned the lights up and gave them a hard look," said Mrs. Roberts. "He came up stairs soon after that and tried to make me forgive him. He pestered me so much that I threw some water at him. The water was in a cup and not in a pitcher as he said."

Mrs. Roberts told of many incidents that disturbed the marital relations between herself and Walter N. Roberts, her husband.

She was asked if she thought her husband's stenographer an attractive woman. "Men might think so," she answered, "I don't."

"I asked my husband to take me out for a walk," said Mrs. Roberts. "He told me he saw enough of my face at home without carting me around with him.

"He also came home with a flashy red necktie," added Mrs. Roberts. "I told him the color was too bright and he answered that the office girl had purchased it for him, because he was dressing too old. He purchased a gray suit and tan shoes. He didn't do it because he wanted to please me.

"Because I wanted to use individual face towels, my husband said I was a crank.

"I had certain scruples about such things.

"My husband's sister and the rest of his family treated me as if I was a maid. They wouldn't introduce me as a member of the family.

"My husband's mother sent him letters urging him to leave me and told him in the letters that he was too young to assume the responsibilities of a family man."

These are among the things she told on the stand.

SEEK INCENDIARY WHO BORED HOLES TO SET STORE FIRE

The police are hunting for a man who adopted a novel way to burn the saloon of Eaton B. Lloyd & Company, at No. 1120 Washington street, South End. First he bored several holes through the side of the building. Then he got a can of kerosene oil and poured this through the holes inside the store. All that remained to do then was to light a match and drop it through one of the holes.

The blaze was seen by a citizen before it had progressed very far, however, and he ran to the engine house and called Engine 3 and Ladder 3 on a still alarm. The firemen quickly put out the blaze with a loss estimated at not more than $50.

CHANGES WOULD KILL HOME RULE

LONDON, May 27.—So many amendments to the Home Rule bill have been filed with the clerk of House of Commons that, if many of them should pass, they would make the bill useless. Most of them are by Conservative members.

The extreme radical members, on the other hand, aim at giving the Irish Parliament more power and making it more democratic, while some of their nonconformist colleagues would have clauses inserted to safeguard their fellow-religionists of Ulster.

While most of the amendments proposed by Unionists aim at destroying the bill, there are some that will doubtless receive consideration as tending to improve the measure.

It is strange to find two Unionist members, Viscount Castlereagh and Lord Claude Hamilton, both sons of Peers, who have been Lord Lieutenants of Ireland, proposing the abolition of that office and substituting a secretary-ship of State—a change that has more often been associated with Radical policy.

Several members would have the bill submitted to the people of the United Kingdom before being ratified, or postponed for four years, or until the government had carried out the promised reconstitution of the House of Lords.

MISS WIDENER TO MARRY ON JUNE 19

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Arrangements have been completed for the marriage of Miss Eleanor Elkins Widener, daughter of Mrs. George D. Widener, to Fitz Eugene Dixon, despite the fact that the family of the bride is in deep mourning for the death of her father and brother, who lost their lives on the Titanic. The wedding will take place on June 19 at Lynnewood Hall, the home of the bride's mother.

SIX GAMBLERS FINED $5 EACH AT NEWTON

Frank H. White, Mathew McBride, William Stumpf, Robert H. Farneaux, Frank Bannon and William J. Kiley were all fined $5 for gambling on Sunday in Newton today. The men were playing in a barn in Watertown street, and Sergeant Bernard Burke and Officer John Monaghan raided the place.

CHAMP CLARK IS STRONG IN POLL

Speaker Champ Clark and Colonel Roosevelt will be chosen as the Presidential candidates of their respective parties according to a poll taken today among the delegates to the City Planning convention in session at Hotel Lenox.

The delegates comprise some of the most prominent men of the United States. They come from all over the country. Many of them are Mayors of cities. The notable gathering afforded a rare chance to get the Presidential sentiment from various sections of the Union.

From all over the country, Clark sentiment was reported. It extends from California to Massachusetts. Roosevelt seems to be growing. Michigan for instance, is on record for Taft but the feeling in the State is strong for Roosevelt. Conservative Philadelphia has fallen in line with the rest of that State for the Colonel.

Others on the List.

Delegates from New York declared they wanted Hughes. Little Taft sentiment could be found and Wilson was barely mentioned. Ohio men declare that they want a chance to vote for Bryan.

The result of a canvass of the earliest delegates to reach the city and interviews with some of them follow:

For Rosevelt	7.
For Taft	2.
For Hughes	1.
For Clark	7.
For Wilson	1.
Non-Committal	15.

Delegate Bancroft of Detroit had this to say:

"They would not give us the presidential preference primary out in our State, so we are on record for Taft. But as a matter of fact the State is overwhelmingly for Roosevelt. Personally I'm not so strong for T. R. as some, but I prefer him to Taft. If Taft is nominated the Republican ticket will be scratched right and left in Michigan."

Wilson Has No Chance.

Delegate Ashley of Toledo said:

"I was elected a Wilson man. I think that when convention time comes I'll help to make Bryan the Democratic candidate. I was for Wilson, but I do not think he stands any chance to win."

Delegate Bennett of Hartford:

"I do not think that I want to commit myself, but down my way everything is for Taft. But that's largely sentiment, because he went to college in that State."

John W. Mitchell of Los Angeles:

"Clark will unquestionably be the nominee of the Democrats. The Taft and Roosevelt forces are so bitter that neither will be nominated. I expect to see the Republicans name Justice Hughes."

Delegate Halderman of Philadelphia said: "I can tell you without any hesitation that we want Colonel Roosevelt. That, of course, is plain enough from the vote in the State, but since the primary Philadelphia has become strong for Roosevelt. We are a conservative city and Taft will get a lot of votes from the business element, but the Colonel is the big man in Pennsylvania."

Hughes Favorite in Troy.

Fred E. Lyon of Troy, N. Y., representing the city of Troy and the Chamber of Commerce, said:

"Out around Troy, there is somewhat of a division between Taft and Roosevelt. As far as sentiment goes, it is practically an even thing. Hughes, however, is a great favorite, and there is a strong hope everywhere that he will be nominated as a compromise candidate. Hughes has no magnetism; he simply looks at you and that's all there is to it. But he has a brain like a diamond. Hughes would make a mighty strong candidate in New York State."

H. T. Marsh of Buffalo, said: "It is all Hughes in New York State in the Republican party and if they can't get him they don't know whom they want."

Rev. Daniel McGurk of Dayton, said: "The Ohio primaries was a true mirror of the situation in that State. Roosevelt is away ahead of Taft in popular sentiment. Harmon is ahead on the Democratic side. But I don't want either.

Would Vote for Byran

"Roosevelt has lost many friends by his undignified conduct. Taft is absolutely impossible. I was one of the original Roosevelt men, but if they'll nominate Bryan I'll vote for him. I know Bryan and Clark personally. Bryan said to me recently:

"'The only one of my original theories that I still hold is the 16 to 1 idea. The others I have outgrown.'

"Mr. Clark is very popular in the middle west. In certain parts of Ohio Wilson would make a good run. Harmon would have no chance outside of his own State."

A. L. Brockway of Syracuse, N. Y., said:

"The sentiment in Syracuse is strongly for Hughes. If they should nominate Hughes the people in New York would vote for him just as fast as they can get to the polls. If they can't get Hughes, it will be a split between Taft and T. R. It is difficult to tell which the people would rather have nominated."

H. C. Allen of Syracuse said:

"On the Democratic side, the only sentiment that makes itself heard at all is the Clark sentiment. Personally, I would like to see Wilson nominated. Wilson on one side and T. R. on the other would make a good fight. I believe, however, that most of the New York delegates and most of the New York citizens, after they have their first choice out of the way will stick for Clark. The first choice might be Gaynor or it might be Underwood. Neither one is a serious candidate, so Clark appears to have the call."

Solid for Taft.

"California is all for Roosevelt. There is no Taft sentiment."

Frank L. Traut of New Britain, Conn., said:

"Our Democratic deltgation is instructed for Governor Baldwin. The Republican delegation is instructed for Taft. That is about the way it sizes up. The Republican party is pretty solid for Taft, and the Democratic party is about as much of a joke in Connecticut as Governor Baldwin is a joke as a candidate."

NORDICA REJECTS OPERATIC OFFERS

LONDON, May 27.—Mme. Nordica arrives in London in a few days to give a concert at Queen's Hall in conjunction with Ysaye, the violinist. Mme. Nordica's representative, Ernest Simmons, has arrived, and is busy trying to find her a house in Mayfair. He declares she is in wonderfully good voice, but will not listen to any offers to go back into opera.

SEVEN HURT IN BUILDING CRASH

Seven men were cut and bruised so severely at the new Gilchrist building at the corner of Washington and Winter streets, just as they began work today, that it was necessary to take them to the Relief Hospital. It was not thought that any of the injured men would die.

The injured men include:

Anthony de Nochantis, No. 11 Sheafe street, North End; nineteen years old, single, scalp wound and abrasions of the arm.

Patsy de Vagelio, No. 84 Prince street; thirty-six years old, married; contusion of the left hip and abrasions of the right side of face.

One of the injured men was unidentified.

The men were caught beneath an avalanche of brick and tiling that became dislodged from the first floor of the structure and crashed down to the basement, where they were preparing to elevate more of the same material.

The brick and tiling had been taken from a small elevator and piled near the edge of a temporary floor. In some way the flooring gave way and the brick and tiling, with some of the wood, rattled to the basemnt.

The workmen tried to escape, but were struck and most of them knocked down. Policemen were soon at the spot. The injured men were helped from the debris, and when an ambulance came they were helped into it and taken to the hospital.

The accident took place at 7:45. The street was crowded with men and women on their way to work. Happening as it did, at one of Boston's most congested spots, there was much excitement for a short time.

Boston Suburbs Gain Faster Than the City

Census Figures Show, However, That Hub Is Fifth City in the Country.

Boston's suburbs are growing in population faster than Boston proper, according to comparative figures just issued by the Census Bureau at Washington.

The figures show that throughout the country the tendency has been to rapid growth in the suburbs, so that the sections surrounding the principal cities now contain about one-third as many inhabitants as the cities themselves. Boston's growth, however has not been as great as that in other cities. Whether she be placed in the cities' population without suburbs or the column where the suburbs are included in the population she holds her place as the fifth city in the country; but where the average increase in population of the suburbs throughout the country has been 43 per cent. for the years 1900-1910, Boston's suburbs have grown only 23.4 per cent.

If Pittsburg and St. Louis both count their suburbs, Pittsburg ranks fifth in population, with 1,042,855. But without suburbs, St. Louis is larger, with 687,029 to Pittsburg's 533,905.

Boston's population without her suburbs is 670 585. With suburbs, it is 1,520,470.

The five central cities showing the greatest growth without suburbs are Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Ore., Oakland and Detroit. Those showing the largest growth with their suburbs are: Seattle, Portland, Ore., Los Angeles, Denver and St. Louis, in that order.

Chicago's suburbs have shown the greatest growth in the last census period, increasing 87.7 per cent.

MINISTERS RECALL THE DAYS OF '61 AT G. A. R. SERVICE

How the battles of the Civil War were fought were retold today by Boston Baptist ministers at their Grand Army service today in Chipman Hall. Rev. A. M. Crane of Maplewood, who spent three years in the war told of battles in which he took part. Rev. E. C. Wheeler of Woodville told how much suffering from exposure as well as from wounds came to the average soldier and why his name and his service should be always honored.

Rev. Willis P. Odell, D. D., pastor of St. Mark's Methodist Church, Brookline, addressed the Methodist Preachers' meeting in Wesleyan Hall on what made a good soldier. He said that the three greatest men in American history were George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and William McKinley. "These are the three greatest names in American history, and they carried out the three qualities of courage, honesty and piety," said the speaker."

250 CUTTERS AT SIX FACTORIES STRIKE AT LYNN

Two hundred and fifty cutters went on strike in six shoe factories in Lynn today for more pay. The cutting rooms of the factories affected by the strike order were empty, and at noon the Lynn Manufacturers Association held a special meet to discuss the situation.

The strike is the result of the action of the Cutters' Assembly, Knights of Labor, last Fall in voting a demand for an increase of three-quarters of a cent in the price list for boots per pair, and a half cent on each pair of Oxfords. This demand was enforced in most of the shops on January 1. Six factories had working agreements which did not come to an end until today. It was in these six factories that the strike was called.

DOCK EXPERTS TO VISIT BOSTON SOON

Harbor development experts from Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia and other foreign countries to the number of 100 will visit Boston June 5-6, when hospitality will be extended by the city, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Boston City Club. STORMS BRING UP 28 BODIES IN RIVERS

NEW YORK, May 27.—A report made to Police Commissioner Waldo by the harbor squad shows that two severe electrical storms, which occurred in the past month, brought to the surface in the North and East Rivers a total of 28 bidies. Most of them had been in the water for several weeks. Only about half of them have been identified.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Coppers Lower In a Listless Stock Market

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, May 27.—Midday—The Boston market was listless at the start and moved in a narrow range. The tone for coppers was easier. During the first hour Boston & Corbin, Giroux, Greene-Cananea advanced a little, and there were fractional recessions in Amalgamated, Ojibway, East Butte and Santa Fe, Calumet & Arizona went up 1⅛ during the first half-hour.

More interest was shown during early trading in East Boston shares than in coppers. The opening price of the former was 17, a gain of half a point. It soon lost part of the advance. Quincy sold ex-dividend of $1.25.

The market failed to develop strength as the morning passed.

New York Market Dull.

There was a very restricted demand for stocks in the New York market when it opened and buying and selling orders were about equalized. Many issues made gains on small transactions. The most improvement among railroads was in Canadian Pacific which went up ⅝, while Brooklyn Rapid Transit gained ¼, and Union Pacific advanced ⅛. People's Gas was one of the firmest of the specialties, rising ⅜. Steel common was unchanged. Lehigh Valley was the weakest of the hard coal railroads, declining ⅝. Ilinois Central was off a full point. When Brooklyn Rapid Transit touched 90 it had attained a new high record for the present movement. Trading in copper issues was almost at a standstill. The curb was dull and weak.

Recent News From Mines.

A special dispatch from Butte states that when the East Butte Mining Co. holds its annual meeting on June 11, the report for the year will show that during the twelve months ending with March 31 last, production totalled about 13,000,000 pounds of copper, more than 400,000 ounces of silver and about 20,000 ounces of gold. It cost the company about 9 cents a pound to deliver copper in New York. It also stated that it will increase copper production to at least 2,000,000 pounds a month in 1912 and that with the metal selling around its present price earnings will be better than $4 a share on outstanding stock.

Superintendent Goodale has telegraphed President Fay of the Old Colony Co. that Old Colony drill No. 14 is at the depth of 1,169 feet and in amygdaloid showing shot copper in two places, while No. 15 is still reaming. The No. 18 hole in Mayflower is at 1,657 feet and No. 19 at 676 feet.

From another source comes the statement that Supt. Goodale is unable to correlate the amygdaloid cut by Old Colony No. 14 with what Mayflower's No. 17 encountered.

Thompson, Towle & Co. state that the Tennessee Copper Co. management believes that the company will show operating profits of close to $1,200,000 for 1912. After allowing for depreciation charges and the retirement of $150,000 of bonds, net profits for the year are placed at between $900,000 and $1,000,000.

Tuolumne directors say the company is shipping not less than 300 tons a day and May net profits will be about $40,000. It is understood that dividends will be resumed at the August meeting.

The McKinley-Darragh-Savage Mines of Cobalt, Ltd., have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent. and the usual extra bonus of 7 per cent. on the stock, payable July 1 to holders of record June 15.

Financial News in Brief.

The annual meeting of Ahmeek stockholders will be held in the office of the company in this city at 10:20 a. m., June 11 and those of Superior Copper on the same date and half an hour later.

It is cabled from Paris that the quotation of American Smelting stock may be officially listed on the Bourse there by June 1.

There will be a special American Marconi settlement in London this week, and there is some apprehension because of the magnitude of the differences to meet. Gambling there in Marconis has been on a reckless scale, and some very large accounts have been closed for the security of speculators.

The railroad equipment ordered so far this month includes 306,000 tons of rails, 38,800 cars, 51,000 tons of bridge steel and 315 locomotives. It is reported from Pittsburg that buyers are not contracting at this time beyond July 1 for finished steel, and this is taken to indicate the trade thinks prices will stick for a time to the present level. Three railroads placed bridge orders last week. Eight other lines took bids for bridges which will require 20,000 tons of steel.

The London Stock Exchange is closed today, it being a bank and the last of the Whitsuntide holidays.

Domestic cottons exported from the port of New York, so far this year exceed in total shipments for the same period last year about 50 per cent.

The New York, Ontario & Western road has formally applied to the Public Service Commission for authority to issue general mortgage bonds to the amount of $2,171,000. Since December 1, 1910, the company has expended out of income and other moneys in its treasury $1,080,707.17 for the extension and improvement of its facilities.

According to Commerce and Labor statistics, April exports totalled in value $176,100,000, as against $164,000,000 for the same month last year. The imports were valued at $162,700,000, as against $110,800,000 for April 1911.

U. S. District Attorney Rotan of Philadelphia has been authorized by the Department of Justice to immediately begin an investigation on the increase in coal prices, and the Philadelphia Coal Exchange and the Reading Company will be called upon to explain the sudden and arbitrary advance.

The Boston Curb Exchange has admitted to the unqualified list for trading, beginning today, 129,710 shares Smokey Development Company, full paid, non-assessable, capitalization 200,000 shares, par $10; 148,000 shares outstanding, of which 18,200 are in trust until August 1, 1912; 52,000 shares in treasury; properties in Robinson Mining District, Ely, Nev., office of company, No. 50 Congress street; transfer agent, American Trust Company, president, S. Herbert Williams, Boston; vice-president, F. P. Anthony, Winthrop; secretary, H. P. Eastgood, Northampton; treasurer, A. L. Kingsbury, Northampton; director, T. J. Hammond, Northampton.

It is expected that considerable of the financing for New York subways will be done in French and English markets. That there is much money now available in France was shown by the enormous over-subscription for a recent issue of City of Paris bonds.

It is denied in Chicago that Samuel Insull, of the Commonwealth Edison Company, and associates are seeking control of the Ogden Gas Company, the Peoples Gas subsidiary, as a step towards a big merger.

Some concerns, particularly in steel and iron lines, are now having an enormous foreign trade. It is stated that nearly 28 per cent. of the United Steel Corporation products and more than 40 per cent. those of the International Harvester Company are being sold abroad.

That stock markets are dull at present is shown by the fact that the total sales on the New York Stock Exchange last week were only 2,247,780 shares.

$7,404 GIFTS FOR INFANTS' HOSPITAL

Kidder, Peabody & Co. today acknowledged receipt of $7,404 contribution to the fund for the new Infants' Hospital building under construction near the Harvard Medical School. The new building needs about $70,000 more to complete it. The largest contribution acknowledged today is one of $2,000 from the trustees of the will of Andrew C. Slater, given in memory of his wife, Caroline T. Slater. There are contributions of $1,000 from the trustees of the Edward Whitney estate, Charles J. Paine and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Draper.

ROXBURY MAN KILLS SELF WITH PISTOL

While temporarily insane, it is believed, John H. Lamkin, thirty-nine, a cigar maker, committed suicide by shooting himself at the home of his sister, where he lived, No. 70 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury. Lamkin killed himself in the entryway of his house after threatening Julius Hammer, a neighbor, with the pistol when the latter, coming suddenly upon him, saw the revolver and attempted to wrest it from him. Lamkin forced Hammer to retreat into his flat.

One Six-Year Term in the Presidency—A Foolish Suggestion

Six Years Would Be Too Much for a Bad Man; Not Enough for a Good Man

The gentlemen who are planning to change our Presidential system, making the term six years—WITH NO SECOND TERM ALLOWED—mean well, but they don't know and they haven't thought.

Those that have really thought about the question—beginning with Thomas Jefferson, whose strong argument, written in 1805, settles the question definitely up to the present day—realize that the four-year term, with a second term as a proper reward for good service, is the right system.

The President ought to be nominated by the people—although this does not always happen. A good many Presidents have been nominated and elected by money—the money in the hands of a very few men.

With a corporation-made President in office, with only one term permitted, and with the President realizing that he can expect nothing more from the people—HOW MUCH GREATER WOULD BE THE INFLUENCE OF THE CORPORATION THAN THAT OF THE PEOPLE!

At the end of six years the people could do nothing more for their President except say, "Thank you." No matter how faithful he might be to the people, they could not reward him—not even with a second term.

But if the President had proved faithful to the corporations, they, at the end of his single term, could reward him in many ways.

They could give him, for instance, a very large income from an insurance company or a bank and make the job seem most honorable.

They could take care of his relations. They could tell the next President they owned to put their faithful ex-President on the Supreme Bench.

If it were possible for the people to arrange matters SO THAT CORPORATIONS COULD NOT REWARD MEN FORMERLY IN OFFICE, that would be admirable. But if the people should legislate so that the President after one term could have nothing to expect from them, yet with all of the usual rewards to expect from corporations—the corporations would rule even more fully than at present.

There is a constant effort on the part of special interests, and of all those that really object to government by the people to hamper and limit the people in their power.

If this is to be a republic permanently, why not legislate to increase the people's power rather than to diminish it?

Mr. Elihu Root, the ablest legal representative of the biggest dishonest men in the United States, is in favor of only one term for the President.

Of course he is.

He knows that with only one term in office possible, the trust candidate, once elected, would not be tempted to forget his trust friends in the effort "to curry popular favor" and get a second term.

Thomas Jefferson, before he had time to think about it thoroughly, was inclined to favor only one term for the President. But deliberation made him see the thing more clearly, and this is what he wrote on January 6, 1805, to John Taylor:

"My opinion originally was that the President of the United States should have been elected for seven years, and be forever ineligible afterward. I have since become sensible that seven years is too long to be irremovable, and that there should be a peaceable way of withdrawing a man in midway who is doing wrong."

All of those who feel that the people are really not capable of self-government, who believe that a special class of wise and good and powerful men should rule, are constantly inventing new hobbles to hamper and hold the people. All the specious talk about one term for the President of six years and no re-election is simply another set of hobbles to hold the people down.

If a man proves himself incompetent, give the people the right to get rid of him at the end of four years, or, better still, to get rid of him at once by a properly safeguarded expression of public opinion.

If a President is competent and faithful, let the people elect him again, to prove their gratitude and secure his valuable services.

If somebody will invent a law to keep Mr. Elihu Root's friends from nominating Presidents and electing them, and renominating them when that is thought advisable, the law will be welcome. But new laws to limit the people's power are not needed. The Constitution as it stands attends to that task sufficiently.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

WOULD REMOVE THE DUTY ON CATTLE

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

The high price of meats is the principal topic at present among people of small incomes. At present the retail butchers are more interested than any other class because the business has declined one half to what it was before the prices of meat advanced, and nine out of ten are losing money.

A great many people blame the Western packers for the high prices, but it is not altogether their fault. It is impossible to produce good meat in this country without feeding corn to the stock, and corn at 80 and 85 cents per bushel means $7.50 and $8.00 in Chicago stockyards, live weight. It takes a prime steer to dress fifty-five pounds to the hundred. A good many people make the mistake when they look at the quotations of live stock of supposing that the wholesale butchers and the retailers are robbers, which is very unjust.

There are two republics in South America that have double the number of cattle, sheep and lambs that we have. The breed of cattle is the same as ours, but they don't have to feed corn. They have the finest grass in the world the year round, and their cattle at present are supplying the European markets.

We have committees appointed to find out the cost of high prices. If these committees would make a demand on Congress we would soon have a bill passed admitting cattle free of duty, and this would go a long way toward solving our meat problem.

WANTS TWO WIRELESS OPERATORS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

While laws are being framed to secure greater safety in ocean travel, is it not important to demand that every steamer shall also carry two wireless operators, one or the other of whom shall be constantly on duty? Had the signal of distress reached the Carpathia ten minutes later, the operator would have been in bed and the 705 persons in the lifeboats might have died from exposure and injury before a passing steamer could pick them up.

The survivors of the Titanic disaster owe their rescue almost as much to the receipt of that one wireless signal as to the presence of the lifeboats. How useless and hopeless to send out night signals of distress asking for immediate help if instruments on other steamers are unset and operators asleep!

An adequate number of lifeboats is necessary, but it is equally important to have an operator on duty during the dangerous hours of night. Otherwise no steamer can feel assured that distress signals will be received or that help will come in time to save life.

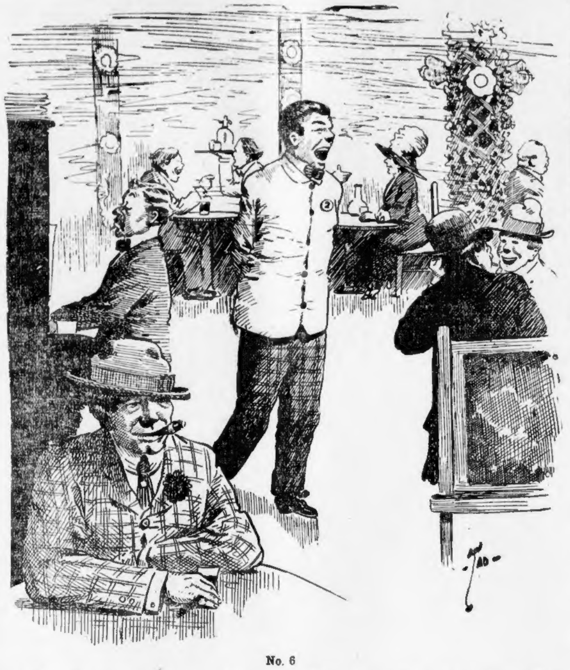
He Never Had a Chance

That is what nine men out of ten who are failures say. Look out that you don't say it yourself.



No. 6

Boxing was stopped, and Yum with his fighter was left in the lurch. All their jewelry went to the pawnbroker's. They stuck it out for a week or two, and then were forced to seek employment.

Yum wasn't a very smart lad. He hadn't much time to study, and—you know. It wasn't necessary, anyway, according to his dope, but now he was up against it.

He finally landed a job in a cafe as waiter and entertainer. He was a pretty good singer and knew a bunch of popular songs, and, although the pay wasn't just what he thought it should be, it was as much as he could make anywhere. He sort of wished now that he had stayed in the little town and worked his way up in business as some of the other lads had done.

The happy days of easy money were gone, and Yum was on his uppers for fair, doing the best he could. Now he longed for the hours he had wasted in pool parlors, cafes and restaurants. He wished he had studied a bit, read a book or two, or at least made an attempt to learn a bit.—By TAD.

Points to Observe in Choosing a Wife

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN who says that he is middle-aged and thinking seriously of matrimony, writes me a letter in which he asks my aid in picking out a wife.

He asks which type of girl, the blonde, the brunette or the auburn-haired, makes the best wife, and says that he is unable to choose between them, because while he personally prefers the blonde, he has always been told that blondes are fickle and conceited.

I can only say to my correspondent that any man who pick out a wife by the color of her hair has so little intelligence that he deserves to get a matrimonial gold brick whether he does or not. The color of a woman's hair, presuming it is hers by nature, and not by right of purchase, has as much to do with the kind of a wife she will make as does the color of the dress she wears.

Success or failure, happiness or misery in married life depends upon the character of a wife, not upon whether her hair is yellow or black or red, or green, or blue, or whether it is straight or curly. Ten or fifteen years of married life changes the most raven tresses, or the most golden locks to drab white, and then the thing that counts to a man is not the hair on his wife's head, but the sweetness of her nature, the loyalty of her heart, the tender helpfulness of her hands.

The Color Doesn't Matter; It's the Way the Hair Is Combed

If I were a man trying to pick out a wife I should take only one look at a woman's hair, and that would be, not to see what particular color it was, but whether it was neatly and sensibly combed or not. I shouldn't marry a woman whose hair looked as if it were always tumbling down, and in need of a good shampoo and a box of hairpins, for I should know by that token that she was a slovenly woman, and would make the kind of wife that would come to breakfast in curl papers and a dirty wrapper, and who would keep a house that would look as if a Kansas cyclone had just passed through it.

Nor should I pick out for a wife the girl whose coiffure was always an exaggeration of the style, and who had a bushel, more or less, of false puffs and switches planned on her head. I should know that she had neither good taste nor good sense, and that she was one of those silly, frivolous little creatures who, as Rose Stahl used to say in the "Chorus Lady," "have nothing on their minds but their hair."

The Color of the Hair Does Not Tell the Owner's Disposition.

The way a girl does her hair is her own, and revealing, and therefore worthy of a man's consideration. The color of the hair is nature's, and indicates nothing of the girl's disposition, for in spite of all of the superstitions, red-headed girls are no more apt to have fiery tempers than black-haired ones; black-haired girls are just as apt to be fickle and vain as blondes, and golden-haired lassies are neither more nor less cold and selfish than maidens with nut brown locks. So, except from what tips you can gain from the manner in which a woman arranges her tresses, it is the height of folly to judge a woman from the standpoint of the hairdressing parlor.

If I were selecting a wife I should not pick her out for what was on the outside of her head, but for what was on the inside of it. It would be her brains and not her hair that would count with me, and if I could find a woman who had real good, hard, old-fashioned horse sense she might have hair the color of a rainbow, or wear a wig for all that I would care.

That is the one thing in matrimony that has got hair and straight fronts and twenty-inch waists and peaches and cream complexions, and all the other attributes of beauty, simply left at the altar. It is the one unfailing panacea for making married life a grand sweet song, and the man who gets a wife whose headpiece carries a full equipment of intelligence need never inquire whether she is one of the Seven Sutherland Sisters, or hangs her hat across the back of a chair at night.

For, if a woman has sense, all other charms and virtues, even hair, will be added unto her according to her need.

I should pick out a wife for her gray matter instead of her golden curls, because I would want for a life companion someone whom I could trust to take a sane, rational view of every subject, and who would be a helpmate instead instead of a hinderance. I would know that if I married a flaxen-haired doll baby I should have to treat her as a doll baby as long as she lived, and I would be afraid that I would get pretty tired playing with a doll during thirty-five or forty years of matrimony.

I should look out for common sense first, foremost and all the time in my selection of a wife, because I would know that the woman who had that would be equal to any emergency that should arise. It wouldn't make any difference whether she had been raised rich or poor, whether she had been used to luxury or hard times, whether she knew how to cook or sew, or not. If I was able to give her Paris clothes and a limousine she would know how to adorn them. If I was poor she would get busy with a cook book and a sewing machine and turn herself into a cordon bleu and a dressmaker before you could say Jack Robinson.

I should pick out a woman with common sense because she would never be a whiner and a complainer. She would know that there must be rain as well as sunshine in life, and when the dark days came she would meet them with a courage that would never falter.

Pick Out a Woman With Good Common Sense as a Wife.

I would pick out a woman with good common sense because the equable mind goes with the equable temper. Jealousy, envy, high temper, bitter speeches, are the hall-marks of the narrow brain, and the limited outlook on life. The woman whose vision holds yesterday as well as tomorrow, who beholds the littleness of things that loom large to the meaner intellect, is the woman of serene disposition, of controlled temper and tongue, the woman who is filled with a cheery optimism at which the heart of a man may warm itself as at a fire that never goes out on the hearth of a home.

Go to, brother. When you seek a wife, turn your eyes away from the color of a woman's locks, and look beneath it, and see what is in her brainpan. It is said that "beauty draws men with a single hair," but just remember it draws them down to Hades as well as up to Heaven.

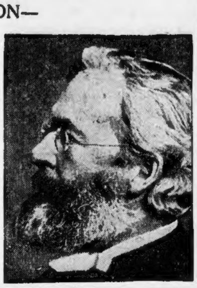
Who Is the Liar, Roosevelt or Taft?

—AND—

A Considerate Word for Astor



Written for the American by

Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

THE controversy between the two Republican candidates for the Presidency has reached an acute stage which is disappointing, humiliating and damaging.

So long as a campaign is utilized to the threshing out of political principles we can afford to be gratified by the intensity with which it is maintained, for the more sharply antagonistic views are set over against each other the more interesting and instructive the process becomes.

But nothing of the kind can be said of the scrimmage at the point at which it has now arrived.

It is no longer a matter of progressivism against conservatism or of conservatism against progressivism.

It is simply a question of who is the liar, Roosevelt or Taft.

It has reduced to a wrangle of personalities, and develops the uncomely passions of the two leaders in the first instance and of their respective followers in the second instance.

It makes a bad spectacle before the world abroad and impairs our political dignity at home.

When two boys commence calling each other names the best treatment to give them is to separate them and send them home; and what shall be said of the two most conspicuous grown-ups in the country, one a President and the other an ex-President, engaged in verbal fisticuffs, with a hundred million people gathered about the ring hounding them on?

Whole Scene Enacted by the Candidates Is Debasing.

The whole scene is sad and debasing. Whether it be man-fight or dog-fight, the effect in either case is debasing.

As there is little probability that either of the two will become President and as the man eventually to be elected to the office will in all likelihood be one who has not been so heavily dusted by the sand of the arena, we can tolerate the discreditable broil with more composure; but, even so, to witness two men—whom at one time the entire nation has regarded with mingled respect and reverence—each associated with the highest position of authority, either in this country or any other, each seeking to crush his antagonist and to deliver to him his death blow, is a situation both distressing and mortifying.

Without seeking to apportion the responsibility the situation remains what it is and will leave neither of the two belligerents occupying the same position in national regard that they occupied before.

I shall righteously resent being called a liar and a fraud, but I shall damage myself more than I shall my vicious calumniator by retorting upon him that he is another.

* * *

IN the midst of the concert of reproaches that is now being hummed around the deaf ears of the dead Astor, there is one considerate word that ought to be spoken in his behalf.

Bad as a man may be he is never quite so bad as he might be; and it is always the part of charity to pick the nugget from the dross and hold it out where the light can shine on it, and the people have a look at it.

Considering his immense wealth, the allowance left to his girl-wife was certainly rather meagre, and her hold even upon that is somewhat stinted; but even so, there was one hard condition that he did not impose upon her, which he would have imposed had he been a Hindu of the olden type, and that was that she should practice suttee and incinerate herself upon the tomb of her departed lord.

The conjugal regard thus evinced for her comfort of body and peace of mind ought to count on the other side of the balance sheet and to that extent soften the asperities of adverse criticism.

With that exception there is not very much to say of a pleasant kind about his testamentary treatment of the young companion of his bosom.

Perhaps that was more his business than it is ours.

It probably was, but so long as people are bound in the ties of communal life they are bound to have opinions, and if they hold those opinions with any intensity of conviction will be likely to express them, and it is to the general advantage that they should, for opinions are for general consumption, not for storage.

For a husband to deal in meagre fashion with his wife while he is still living is a sad blot on connubial devotion, but there is not the venality in that that there is when the same paltry impulse is so stretched to the other side of the grave that the pinch of it remains upon his wife after he is translated.

His attempt to discipline her into post-mortem devotion will very likely result in her making a second matrimonial experiment, out of spite, if for no other reason, especially if an arrangement can be made such as will indemnify her for the sacrifice of her first husband's conditional beneficence.

Not a Success to Hire Women to Be True to First Love.

It is said that the attempt to hire women to be true to their first love is not usually a success.

Love and money belong, respectively, to different orders of commodity. Love is, in fact, almost the only article in general use that cannot be computed in terms of dollars and cents.

And yet, as a finishing remark, it deserves to be said that a woman who abides by her widowhood out of VOLUNTARY loyalty to her deceased husband evinces a quality not so likely to be found in one whose old love can be dissolved in the flames of a new.
